Measuring National Income in the Centrally Planned Economies William Jefferies, 2014-11-27 In 1991 Communism collapsed The cold war was over and the West had won Whole cities Moscow St Petersburg Warsaw Beijing Budapest and Bucharest whole countries indeed were privatised for nothing or next to nothing This was probably the greatest expansion of the world market in history And yet according to national income measurements of the CIA OECD World Bank and IMF this gigantic expansion of market production led to a decline in market production in the very countries where it was introduced How to explain this paradox This book traces the origin of the West s national income measurements from their origin in the 1923 4 Balance developed in the USSR to the USA in the early 1930s via two Soviet exiles Simon Kuznets and Wassily Leontief and then back to the USSR again after a vigorous debate through a protégé of Kuznets Abram Bergson The AFC imputed national incomes to a centrally planned economy based on physical not income measurements This book provides a detailed assessment of the failure of the AFC method to measure the real growth of actual market production during the transition period This book provides a detailed account of the application of national income measurements to the centrally planned economies It assesses all of the major contributors to this debate including Colin Clark Naum Jasny Alexander Gerschenkron G Warren Nutter and Abram Bergson It provides a new much higher estimate of the expansion of market production during the transition period based on an estimate of the actual growth of real market production It discusses the very significant implications of this re estimate for contemporary theories of globalisation element in the building of nations and states cannot be confined to Europe and therefore these diverse yet interlinked case studies cover all continents Authors come to contrasting conclusions some regarding the economic factor as central while others show that nation states came into being before the constitution of a national market The essays leave no doubt that the nation state is an historical phenomenon and as such is liable to expiry both through the process of globalisation and through the development of a cyber society which evades state control By contrast developments in southeastern Europe the former USSR and parts of Africa and the Far East show that building the nation state has not run its course
