The Myth of 1648 Benno Teschke, 2020-05-05 Winner of the 2003 Isaac and Tamara Deutscher Memorial Prize This book rejects a commonplace of European history that the treaties of Westphalia not only closed the Thirty Years War but also inaugurated a new international order driven by the interaction of territorial sovereign states Benno Teschke through this thorough and incisive critique argues that this is not the case Domestic social property relations shaped international relations in continental Europe down to 1789 and even beyond The dynastic monarchies that ruled during this time differed from their medieval predecessors in degree and form of personalization but not in underlying dynamic 1648 therefore is a false caesura in the history of international relations For real change we must wait until relatively recent times and the development of modern states and true capitalism In effect it is not until governments are run impersonally with no function other than the exercise of its monopoly on violence that modern international relations are born

Constructivism in International Relations Maja Zehfuss, 2002-07-25 Maja Zehfuss book offers a fundamental critique of constructivism focusing on the work of Wendt Onuf and Kratochwil Using Germany's shift towards participation in international military operations as an illustration she demonstrates why each version of constructivism fails in its own project and comes apart on the basis of its own assumptions Inspired by Derridean thought this book highlights the political consequences of constructivist representations of reality Each critique concludes that constructivist notions of key concepts are impossible and that this is not merely a question of theoretical inconsistency but of politics The book is premised on the notion that the empirical and the theoretical are less separate than is acknowledged in international relations and must be read as intertwined Zehfuss examines the scholars role in international relations worrying that by looking to constructivism as the future they will be severely curtailing their ability to act responsibly in this area
