Whose View of Life? Jane Maienschein, 2009-07-01 Saving lives versus taking lives These are the stark terms in which the public regards human embryo research a battleground of extremes a war between science and ethics Such a simplistic dichotomy encouraged by vociferous opponents of abortion and proponents of medical research is precisely what Jane Maienschein seeks to counter with this book Whose View of Life brings the current debates into sharper focus by examining developments in stem cell research cloning and embryology in historical and philosophical context and by exploring legal social and ethical issues at the heart of what has become a political controversy Drawing on her experience as a researcher teacher and congressional fellow Jane Maienschein provides historical and contemporary analysis to aid understanding of the scientific and social forces that got us where we are today For example she explains the long established traditions behind conflicting views of how life begins at conception or gradually in the course of development She prepares us to engage a major question of our day How are we as a 21st century democratic society to navigate a course that is at the same time respectful of the range of competing views of life built on the strongest possible basis of scientific knowledge and still able to respond to the momentous opportunities and challenges presented to us by modern biology Maienschein s multidisciplinary perspective will provide a starting point for further attempts to answer this question
