Orthodox doctrine of theosis but his ecumenical interests led him to minimize or overlook key themes in Luther and sharp distinctions between Luther and Orthodox theologians. Mannermaa's colleague Simo Peura then developed this thesis with specific reference to anthropology in a way reminiscent of the sixteenth century reformer Andreas Osiander. On closer inspection the project of Mannermaa and his Finnish colleagues fails to understand adequately both Luther's sources and his own theological development. In this study a theological anthropology which is more consistent with Luther's theology is developed: an anthropology which is determined by God's address to his human creatures: what God himself says we are and what he makes us by that word. Such an answer to the anthropological question refuses to flee from creation but instead upholds the complex and paradoxical nature of human beings as creatures, sinners and saints. What it means to be human has become the major topic in theology, philosophy and the social sciences in our time. On the basis of Luther's understanding this study proposes a view of humanity in which God's word determines what human identity and human existence are. The Creator's address to his creatures makes their existence possible and frees them to be human and nothing less. Schumacher's proposal will command careful study and discussion throughout the world. Robert A. Kolb, Concordia Seminary, Saint Louis, Missouri. Schumacher provides the most comprehensive appraisal of Luther to date. He shows that Luther's is not an alternative view of divinity to that of medieval theologians but a subversion of it. No ontic category is as real or definitive of the sinful human as God's justifying word. It is that word alone which imparts grace and new life. Schumacher's work is required reading for any scholar of Reformation studies who wants to understand Luther on his own terms. Mark C. Science and Catholicism in Argentina 1750-1960 is the first comprehensive study on the relationship between science and religion in a Spanish speaking country with a Catholic majority and a Latin pattern of secularisation. The text takes the reader from Jesuit missionary science in colonial times through the conflict-ridden 19th century to the Catholic revival of the 1930s in Argentina. The diverse interactions between science and religion revealed in this analysis can be organised in terms of their dynamic of secularisation. The indissoluble identification of science and the secular which operated at rhetorical and institutional levels among the liberal elite and the socialists in the 19th century lost part of its force with the emergence of Catholic scientists in the course of the 20th century In agreement with current views that deny science the role as the driving force of secularisation this historical study concludes that it was the process of secularisation that shaped the interplay between religion and science not the other way around
