Policy in Southern Africa Richard John Mahlum, 1980 This thesis is designed to demonstrate analytically three propositions First that the U S has maintained a foreign policy toward southern Africa which has been unevenly implemented and even neglected by various administrations due to perceptual differences about Africa and due to other manifest priorities on the agenda of U S foreign policy concerns Second that a major determinant of U S policy in southern Africa has been the concern over potential superpower rivalry and intervention in the region as a dangerous and unwarranted element in the U S Soviet competitive relationship Third that an overreaction in the U S to the perceived Soviet threat and a dramatic reinstitution of the East West perspective in U S foreign policy priorities could lead the U S to set aside the regional approach toward southern Africa that has marked the Carter Administration's African policy since 1977 This development may create a situation of incipient crisis for future U S relations in the region Author Making American Foreign Policy Ole

Holsti, 2013-02-01 Ole Holsti one of the deans of US foreign policy analysis examines the complex factors involved in the policy decision making process including the beliefs and cognitive processes of foreign policy leaders and the influence public opinion has on foreign policy The essays in addition to being both theoretically and empirically rich are historical in breadth with essays on Vietnam as well as contemporary in relevance with essays on public opinion and foreign policy after 9
