The Human Species: An Introduction to Biological Anthropology John Relethford,2009-08-28 This text introduces physical anthropology the science of human biological evolution and variation Divided into four parts it addresses the major questions that concern biological anthropologists What are humans Where are our origins How did we evolve and are we still evolving and What does the future hold for the human species with an emphasis on hypothesis testing and the relationship between biology and culture An Introduction to Human Evolutionary Anatomy Leslie Aiello,Christopher Dean,1990-09-11 An anthropologist and an anatomist have combined their skills in this book to provide students and research workers with the essentials of anatomy and the means to apply these to investigations into hominid form and function Using basic principles and relevant bones conclusions can be reached regarding the probable musculature stance brain size age weight and sex of a particular fossil specimen The sort of deductions which are possible are illustrated by reference back to contemporary apes and humans and a coherent picture of the history of hominid evolution appears Written in a clear and concise style and beautifully illustrated An Introduction to Human Evolutionary Anatomy is a basic reference for all concerned with human evolution as well as a valuable companion to both laboratory practical sessions and new research using fossil skeletons

The Concept of Race in Natural and Social Science E. Nathaniel Gates,2014-05-01 Explores the concept of race The term race which originally denoted genealogical or class identity has in the comparatively brief span of 300 years taken on an entirely new meaning In the wake of the Enlightenment it came to be applied to social groups This ideological transformation coupled with a dogmatic insistence that the groups so designated were natural and not socially created gave birth to the modern notion of races as genetically distinct entities The results of this view were the encoding of race and racial hierarchies in law literature and culture How racial categories facilitate social control The articles in the series demonstrate that the classification of humans according to selected physical characteristics was an arbitrary decision that was not based on valid scientific method They also examine the impact of colonialism on the propagation of the concept and note that racial categorization is a powerful social force that is often used to promote the interests of dominant social groups Finally the collection surveys how laws based on race have been enacted around the world to deny power to minority groups A multidisciplinary resource This collection of outstanding articles brings multiple perspectives to bear on race theory and draws on a wider ranger of periodicals than even the largest library usually holds Even if all the articles were available on campus chances are that a student would have to track them down in several libraries and microfilm collections Providing of course that no journals were reserved for graduate students out for binding or simply missing This convenient set saves students substantial time and effort by making available all the key articles in one reliable source Authoritative commentary

The series editor has put together a balanced selection of the most significant works accompanied by expert commentary A general introduction gives important background information and outlines fundamental issues current scholarship and scholarly controversies Introductions to individual volumes put the articles in context and draw attention to germinal ideas and major shifts in the field After reading the material even a beginning student will have an excellent grasp of the basics of the subject

ANTHROPOLOGY includes chapter outlines key terms Internet activities and practice tests answers provided with a variety of question types ideal for test prep The Human Species John Relethford,2005 Now in full color this biological anthropology text presents balanced coverage of the major components of the field genetics and evolutionary theory human biological variation primate biology and behavior and human evolution The relationship between biology and culture is a major focus throughout the text and the emphasis is on the human species within the primate order discussions of mammals and nonhuman primates continually refer back to their potential relevance for understanding the human species The text contains material often neglected in introductory texts such as discussions of adaptation human health and disease and demography and human growth The First Humans Frederick E. Grine,John G Fleagle,Richard E. Leakey,2009-05-24

There are some issues in human paleontology that seem to be timeless. Most deal with the origin and early evolution of our own genus, something about which we should care. Some of these issues pertain to taxonomy and systematics: How many species of Homo were there in the Pliocene and Pleistocene? How do we identify the earliest members of the genus Homo? If there is more than one Pliocene/Pleistocene species, how do they relate to one another, and where and when did they evolve? Other issues relate to questions about body size, proportions, and the functional adaptations of the locomotor skeleton: When did the human postcranial Bauplan evolve, and for what reasons? What behaviors and what behavioral limitations can be inferred from the postcranial bones that have been attributed to Homo habilis and Homo erectus? Still other issues relate to growth, development, and life history strategies, and the biological and archeological evidence for diet and behavior in early Homo. It is often argued that dietary change played an important role in the origin and early evolution of our genus, with stone tools opening up scavenging and hunting opportunities that would have added meat protein to the diet of Homo. Still other issues relate to the environmental and climatic context in which this genus evolved.
