Knowledge And Evidence:

Using Knowledge and Evidence in Health Care François Champagne, Louise Lemieux-Charles, 2008-05-24 At the clinical management and policy levels the use of knowledge and evidence in health care has become a worldwide priority The contributors to Using Knowledge and Evidence in Health Care seek to broaden our understanding of the complexity involved in health care decision making by integrating social science knowledge and exploring some of the challenges and limits of evidence in different health care contexts Louise Lemieux Charles and François Champagne have brought together an esteemed group of scholars to provide a conceptual framework that illustrates the factors critical to analysing and optimizing the use of knowledge and evidence Previous studies have focused primarily on the medical literature without acknowledging the social sciences tradition With its integration of works from political science public policy informatics and other disciplines Using Knowledge and Evidence in Health Care provides a bridge between both worlds By bringing together different views on the topic the volume goes beyond strict disciplinary boundaries to provide the fullest exploration of knowledge and evidence in health care

Evidence-based Practice in Social Work Ian Mathews, Karin Crawford, 2011-06-16 At a time when the credibility of social work is again being questioned this book offers a critical approach to the debate concerning the reliability and validity of the evidence research and knowledge that underpins professional social work practice It critiques the notion of evidence and argues that knowledge is a much broader more appropriate concept to consider There is analysis of the different components and sources of this knowledge and an exploration of the often discordant interface between practice and knowledge Finally it supports the view that knowledge can be actively developed and tested by a range of people Leadership for

Competence Michael Eraut, 2002-11-01 This volume analyzes different types of knowledge and know how used by practising professionals in their work and how these different kinds of knowledge are acquired by a combination of learning from books learning from people and learning from personal experience Drawing on various examples problems addressed include the way theory changes and is personalized in practice and how individuals form generalizations out of their practice Eraut considers the meaning of client centredness and its implications and to what extent professional knowledge is based on intuition understanding and learning He considers the issue of competence versus knowledge and the effect of lifelong learning on the quality of practice Scepticism and Reliable Belief José L. Zalabardo, 2012-07-26 Reliabilist accounts of knowledge are widely seen as having the resources for blocking sceptical arguments since these arguments appear to rely on assumptions about the nature of knowledge that are rendered illegitimate by reliabilist accounts. In Scepticism and Reliable Belief Jos L. Zalabardo assesses the main arguments against the possibility of knowledge and challenges their consensus. He articulates and defends a reliabilist theory of knowledge that belongs firmly in the truth tracking tradition. Zalabardo's main analytic tool in the account of knowledge he provides is the theory of probability; he analyses both truth tracking and evidence in these terms and argues that this account of knowledge has the resources for blocking the main standard lines of sceptical reasoning including the regress argument, arguments based on sceptical hypotheses and the problem of the criterion. But although Zalabardo's theory can be used to refute the standard lines of sceptical reasoning, there is a sceptical argument against which his account offers no defence as it does not rely on any assumptions that he renders illegitimate. According to this argument, we might have considerable success in the enterprise of forming true beliefs if this is so, we have knowledge of the world. However, we cannot know that we are successful even if we are. Beliefs to this effect cannot be knowledge on Zalabardo's reliabilist account since these beliefs do not track the truth and we cannot obtain adequate evidence in their support. Zalabardo ends with the suggestion that the problem might have a metaphysical solution, although the sceptical argument may make no illegitimate epistemological assumptions, it does rest on a questionable account of the nature of cognition.

The Encyclopædia of Evidence Edgar Whittlesey Camp, John Finley Crowe, 1905 Politics and Policy Knowledge in Federal Education Steven Putansu, 2020-02-27 Policy knowledge derived from data, information and evidence is a powerful tool for contributing to policy discussions and debates and for understanding and improving the effectiveness, efficiency and equity of government action. For decades, politicians, advocates, reformers and researchers have simultaneously espoused this value while also paradoxically lamenting the lack of impact of policy knowledge on decision making and the failure of related reforms. This text explores this paradox, identifying the reliance on a proverb of using policy knowledge to supplant politics as a primary culprit for these perceived failures. The evidence in this book suggests that any consideration of the role of policy knowledge in decision making must be considered alongside rather than in place of considerations of the ideologies, interests and institutional factors that shape political decisions. This contextually rich approach offers practical insights to understand the role of policy knowledge and to better leverage it to support good governance decisions.

Ideas, Evidence, and Method Graciela De Pierris, 2015-04-30 Graciela De Pierris presents a novel interpretation of the relationship between skepticism and naturalism in Hume's epistemology and a new appraisal of Hume's place within early modern thought. Whereas a dominant trend in recent Hume scholarship maintains that there are no skeptical arguments concerning causation and induction in Book I, Part III of the Treatise, Graciela De Pierris presents a detailed reading of the skeptical argument she finds there and how this argument initiates a train of skeptical reasoning that begins in Part III and culminates in Part IV. This reasoning is framed by Hume's version of the modern theory of ideas developed by Descartes and Locke. The skeptical implications of this theory however do not arise as in traditional interpretations of Hume's skepticism from the veil of perception. They arise from Hume's elaboration of a presentational phenomenological model of ultimate evidence according to which there is always a justificatory gap between what is or has been immediately presented to the mind and any ideas that go beyond it. This happens paradigmatically in the causal inductive inference and as De Pierris argues in demonstrative inference as well. Yet in spite of his firm commitment to radical skepticism Hume also accepts the naturalistic standpoint of science and common life and he does so on the novel interpretation presented here because of an equally firm commitment to Newtonian science in general and the Newtonian inductive method in particular. Hume defends the Newtonian method against the mechanical philosophy while simultaneously rejecting all attempts including those of the Newtonians to find a place for the supernatural within our understanding of nature.

Externalism about Knowledge Luis R. G. Oliveira, 2023-07-02 Externalism about knowledge is thriving in contemporary epistemology. Nonetheless externalism is too often caricatured as merely reliabilism too often reduced to simply externalism about justification and rarely considered as a cohesive family of related but importantly different views. Externalism About Knowledge addresses all of these issues by bringing new essays from leading externalist epistemologists working on seven different branches of this tradition: process reliabilism, tracking views, safety views, virtue epistemology, proper functionalism, naturalized epistemology, and knowledge first epistemology. This collection highlights their unity, their differences, their interconnections, and their most recent challenges, developments, and extensions.

Perceived Knowledge of the Registered Nurse in Managing Hyperglycemia According to Evidence-Based Practice in the Acute Care Setting Donna M. Kimball, 2008-08-17 The purpose of this study was to examine the perception of the registered nurses' knowledge in managing the non-diabetic patient with hyperglycemia in the acute care setting. The evidence that has been identified to keep tight glycemic control has demonstrated better outcomes for this population of patients. A non-experimental quantitative approach was used in this study. Data was obtained based on a descriptive design using a survey to collect information from an identified population. A convenience sample of 298 registered nurses who worked as staff nurses at a small community hospital was selected to obtain information for this study. A questionnaire was the tool developed to collect the data for this research design. This questionnaire was developed from the research results found in the literature. The questionnaire had close-ended questions for the demographic information. Open-ended questions were used on a Likert scale to obtain data on perceived knowledge of evidence-based practice and knowledge on hyperglycemia. One hundred and one questionnaires were returned, yielding a 34% response rate. A normal fasting blood sugar was identified by 72% of the sample and 42% knew the goal of intensive insulin therapy. Certification in a specialty was obtained by 25% of the sample, 33% belonged to a professional organization, and 42% subscribed to nursing journals. The questions on evidence-based practice and its place in clinical practice were identified by an overall average of 13% of the sample The responses on hyperglycemia in the non diabetic patient showed an overall average of 21% of the sample with knowledge that is supported by research for best clinical practice The results of this descriptive study supported the literature that the number one barrier in managing hyperglycemia is lack of knowledge Evidence based practice needs to be imbedded in nursing culture The delivery of nursing care needs to be benchmarked against research put into clinical practice and evaluated Deliberate care with specific outcomes is the standard that will be required Identifying the knowledge of the staff in managing hyperglycemia will allow for educational programs to be developed to bring the knowledge base of the staff nurse forward to achieve best practice

The First Principles of Knowledge John Rickaby,1901 Routledge Handbook of Ecosystem Services Marion Potschin,Roy Haines-Young,Robert Fish,R. Kerry Turner,2016-01-22 The idea that nature provides services to people is one of the most powerful concepts to have emerged over the last two decades It is shaping our understanding of the role that biodiverse ecosystems play in the environment and their benefits for humankind As a result there is a growing interest in operational and methodological issues surrounding ecosystem services amongst environmental managers and many institutions are now developing teaching programmes to equip the next generation with the skills needed to apply the concepts more effectively This handbook provides a comprehensive reference text on ecosystem services integrating natural and social science including economics Collectively the chapters written by the world s leading authorities demonstrate the importance of biodiversity for people policy and practice They also show how the value of ecosystems to society can be expressed in monetary and non monetary terms so that the environment can be better taken into account in decision making The significance of the ecosystem service paradigm is that it helps us redefine and better communicate the relationships between people and nature It is shown how these are essential to resolving challenges such as sustainable development and poverty reduction and the creation of a green economy in developing and developed world contexts

A Digest of the Law of Evidence in Criminal Cases Henry Roscoe,1835 Consuming Knowledge: Studying Knowledge Use in Leisure and Work Activities Steven D. Silver,2012-12-06 It is difficult to overstate the importance of personal consumption both to individual consumers and to the economy While consumer are recognized as valuing market goods and services for the activities they can construct from them in the frameworks of several disciplines consequences of the characteristics of goods and services they use in these activities have not been well studied In the discourse to follow I will contrast knowledge yielding and conventional goods and services as factors in the construction of activities that consumers engage in when they are not in the workplace Consumers will be seen as deciding on non work activities and the inputs to these activities according to their objectives and the values and cumulated skills they hold I will suggest that knowledge content in these activities can be efficient for consumer objectives and also have important externalities through its effect on productivity at work and economic growth The exposition will seek to elaborate these points and contribute to multi disciplinal dialogue on consumption It takes as its starting point the contention that consumption is simultaneously an economic and social psychological process and that integration of content can contribute to explanation Evidence, Respect and Truth Liat Levanon, 2022-11-03 Can we rely solely on statistics when we judge what is true and just This book takes a holistic approach to addressing this question It considers the legal trial as its paradigmatic case study before analysing a wide range of different cases including profiling the use of algorithms to predict students grades and the authorisation of automated cars The book suggests that when we make judgements about the truth or about justice approximations are not good enough Truth and justice are uncompromising They must be so because the value that underlies them both is respect and respect takes no compromise Thus in the search for truth as in the search for justice a body of evidence that imposes a statistical compromise will not do Only evidence that in principle allows reaching the truth and doing justice is good evidence Once such evidence has been traced the burden is on us to make good use of the evidence and reach truth and justice We might or might not succeed but once we have done our best on evidence that allows success our judgements are justified and as such they can resolve conflicts over the truth and over justice
