The British National Bibliography Arthur James Wells, 2006 Perceiving Environmental Quality Kenneth Craik, 2013-03-09 The purpose of this publication is to report on a series of research workshops which examined the place of environmental perception in a comprehensive system of indices for assessing and monitoring trends in environmental quality The specific objectives of the workshops were to 1 define the state of the art in research on perception of environmental quality and identify salient conceptual and methodological issues 2 delineate potential uses of perceived environmental quality indices PEQIs and related issues regarding ways in which PEQIs might enhance implementation revision or refinement of policy orientations 3 identify the types of research which would assess adequately the efficacy of the development and the application of PEQIs and 4 outline a realistic pragmatic research strategy that relates to potential uses and identified policy issues The workshops were supported by a grant from the National Science Foundation No GSOC75 0782 and were held during the spring and summer of 1975 in Amherst Massachusetts and New York City Contributed chapters for this volume were commissioned with funds from the Institute for Man and Environment University of Massachusetts Scientific contributors to the understanding of environmental perception have increased substantially over the last decade along with recognition that this realm of knowledge is crucial for an informed perspective on the impact of man on the environment At the same time there exists general consensus that the field remains diffuse and uncoordinated Lowenthal 1972b Structure, Evidence, and Heuristic Armin W. Schulz, 2020-04-22 This book is the first systematic treatment of the philosophy of science underlying evolutionary economics It does not advocate an evolutionary approach towards economics but rather assesses the epistemic value of appealing to evolutionary biology in economics more generally. The author divides work in evolutionary economics into three distinct albeit related forms: a structural form, an evidential form, and a heuristic form. He then analyzes five examples of work in evolutionary economics falling under these three forms. For the structural form, he examines the parallelism between natural selection and economic decision making and the parallelism between natural selection and market competition. For the evidential form, he looks at the relationship between animal and human economic decision making and the evolutionary explanation of diversity in human economic decision making. Finally, for the heuristic form, he focuses on the plausibility of equilibrium modeling in evolutionary ecology and economics. In this way, he shows that linking evolutionary biology and economics can make for a powerful methodological tool that can enable progress in our understanding of various economics questions. Structure, Evidence, and Heuristic will be of interest to scholars and advanced students working in philosophy of science, philosophy of social science, evolutionary biology, and economics. Resources in Education, 1993     NIJ Reports, 1986     Architecture Series: Bibliography, 1980
