Environment Int Trade Negotiat:

The EU as International Environmental Negotiator Tom Delreux, 2016-02-17 Delreux examines how the EU functions when it participates in international environmental negotiations. In particular, this book looks at the internal EU decision making process with regard to international negotiations that lead to multilateral environmental agreements. By studying eight such decision making processes, the book analyses how much negotiation autonomy or discretion the EU negotiator, the European Commission or the Council Presidency enjoys vis-à-vis the member states it represents and how this particular degree of discretion can be explained. The book's empirical evidence is based on extensive literature review, primary and semi-confidential document research as well as interviews with EU decision makers. It is aimed at a readership interested in EU politics and decision making, global multilateral governance, environmental policy science, and methodological development of Qualitative Comparative Analysis.

Indigenous Peoples and International Trade John Borrows, Risa Schwartz, 2020-06-18 The United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples is seen primarily as an international human rights instrument. However, the Declaration also encompasses cultural, social, and economic rights. Taken in the context of international trade and investment, the UN Declaration is a valuable tool to support economic self-determination of Indigenous peoples. This volume explores the emergence of Indigenous peoples' participation in international trade and investment as well as how it is shaping legal instruments in environment and trade, intellectual property, and traditional knowledge. One theme that is explored is agency. From amicus interventions at the World Trade Organization to developing a future precedent for a Trade and Indigenous Peoples Chapter, Indigenous peoples are asserting their right to participate in decision making. The authors, both Indigenous and non-Indigenous experts on trade and investment law, provide needed ideas and recommendations for governments, academia, and policy thinkers to achieve economic reconciliation.

Environmental Protection, China and International Trade Fengan Jiang, 2021-07-07 This book argues for a balanced approach to greening the World Trade Organization (WTO) ban on China's export duties without opening the floodgates to protectionism. As a result of the China Raw Materials and China Rare Earths decisions, China is largely prohibited from using export duties to address environmental problems, including those associated with climate change. This is despite a number of climate studies having suggested that Chinese export duties could be useful for reducing carbon leakage, an issue of international concern. This book puts the case for a more balanced approach. It shows that a harsh ban on China's export duties constrains its policy space to protect the environment, particularly in the context of climate change. The work presents feasibility tests for various legal solutions that have been discussed for adjusting the ban, and it accordingly proposes a more feasible approach that would allow China to help protect the environment without advancing protectionism. The proposed legal option provides a less protectionist alternative to export duties, namely export duties plus export duties in combination with supplementary restrictions on Chinese consumption. This analysis also yields insights regarding ways to correct WTO precedents which suggests a moderate alternative response to an important issue behind the Appellate Body crisis The book will be a valuable resource for academics researchers and policymakers in the areas of International Trade Law Environmental Law and China International Trade and the Environment United States.
