McFeters,2013-03-07 The microbiology of drinking water remains an important worldwide concern despite modern progress in science and engineering Countries that are more technologically advanced have experienced a significant reduction in water borne morbidity within the last 100 years This reduction has been achieved through the application of effective technologies for the treatment disinfection and distribution of potable water However morbidity resulting from the ingestion of contaminated water persists globally and the available epidemiological evidence Waterborne Diseases in the United States G F Craun ed 1986 CRC Press demonstrates a dramatic increase in the number of waterborne outbreaks and individual cases within the United States since the mid 1960s In addition it should also be noted that the incidence of water borne outbreaks of unknown etiology and those caused by new pathogens such as Campylobacter sp is also increasing in the United States Although it might be debated whether these increases are real or an artifact resulting from more efficient reporting it is clear that waterborne morbidity cannot be ignored in the industrialized world More significantly it represents one of the most important causes of illness within developing countries Approximately one half the world's population experiences diseases that are the direct consequence of drinking polluted water Such illnesses are the primary cause of infant mortality in many Third World countries
