Migrating Enterprise and Migrant Entrepreneurship Stephan Raes, 2000 From the 1960s onwards the clothing industry in the Netherlands and elsewhere in the European Union experienced a deep crisis Numerous firms went bankrupt and workers lost their jobs Imports from low wage countries started providing the bulk of retailers collections However in the 1980s a surprising development took place In Amsterdam a substantial number of new small clothing firms mostly run by Turkish immigrants were established focusing on short cycle production During the 1990s most of these disappeared again At the same time the import pattern changed to the Mediterranean and Eastern Europe Stephan Raes shows that the large retailers have become the most powerful players in the sector and he places the developments against the background of transformations in the political economy of the Netherlands and Turkey Stephan Raes is an economic anthropologist who currently works at the department of foreign economic relations of the Ministry of Economic Affairs in the Netherlands

Immigrant Businesses J. Rath, 2000-02-01. In the past few years, a considerable number of immigrants have established their own businesses. In doing so, they have contributed in many ways to the economic development of American and European metropolitan areas. Some businesses have been incorporated into the mainstream, while others have stayed on the economic fringes and got engaged in the informal economy. The starting point of this book is that a proper understanding of these businesses is served by focusing on the embeddedness of immigrant businesses in their economic, politico-institutional, and social environments from a multi-disciplinary perspective rather than confining the attention to ethnic, cultural, or economic sociological aspects only.

Economics of International Business Mark Casson, 2000-01-01. This is an interesting book on an important topic. Mikael Linden, Scandinavian Economic History Review. This book is indispensable reading for all researchers and practitioners in the international business field, as well as economists and academics alike. Giustificativo Pubblicato sul Bollettino del CIRT. Economics of International Business sets out a new agenda for international business research. Mark Casson asserts that it is time to move the subject on from sterile debates about transaction cost economics and resource-based theories of the firm. Instead of focusing on the individual firm, the new agenda focuses on the global systems view of international business. A static view of the firm's environment is replaced by a dynamic view which highlights the volatility of the international business environment Coping with volatility requires entrepreneurial skills flexibility and the need to synthesize information on a global basis To co ordinate the global system properly entrepreneurs must co operate through social networks of trust as well as competing Constructing a network of joint ventures it is argued is simply not enough Building on his previous book The Organization of International Business Mark Casson shows that with suitable modifications the methods of economics can be used to analyse all of these issues in a rigorous way The tools of business strategy are too clumsy to address the more subtle issues whilst descriptive approaches fail to bring key issues into sharp relief This book is indispensable reading for all researchers and practitioners in the international business field as well as economists and academics alike

Institutions and the Evolution of Modern Business Mark Casson, Mary B. Rose, 2014-01-14 The papers in this volume demonstrate that it can be fruitful to apply institutional theory to business history In addition the volume shows that the wider study of the institutional environment is inseparable from the study of business It is clear however that although institutionalism in business history has a long pedigree many areas of research and potential interaction with theory remain to be explored The extent to which this will occur inevitably depends upon the degree to which the interests of theoreticians serve the needs of historians and vice versa

Entrepreneurship and Local Economic Development Bruno Dallago, Ermanno Tortia, 2018-09-05 This book focuses on the nature and role of entrepreneurship in modern developed and emerging economies and societies its relation to governments and universities and its role in the often forgotten informal economy The aim is to position entrepreneurship in the post crisis context and explore how its relation to universities and governments contributes to explain the countries and territories growth performance and resilience or vulnerability to the crisis The accent is particularly on processes and patterns at local level and in small and medium sized enterprises in local economic systems and districts local systems of innovation and the types and configurations of innovation these give origin to With globalization entrepreneurship has become fundamental for the competitiveness of territories and countries for policy management and for development The local dimension is fundamental because of agglomeration economies and effects the advantages of proximity and the nature of knowledge and information Furthermore territories carry to the centre stage tacit knowledge localized social capital embeddedness and interpersonal relations as fundamental components of their endogenous socio economic development and competitiveness When local systems are connected in a horizontal network they contribute to the strength of national and international systems To play a constructive role from this perspective entrepreneurship must avoid local entrenchment and support the local economy to upgrade and be competitive To do this the entrepreneurs interaction and alliance with universities and governments is a must for those countries and localities wanting to emerge This requires that enterprises universities and governments create synergies and spill overs to their mutual advantage

Community Colleges as Incubators of Innovation Rebecca A. Corbin, Ron Thomas, 2023-07-03 While community colleges have traditionally focused on providing students with opportunities to gain credentials for employment the increasingly important question is Are they preparing students for the looming dynamic disruptive and entrepreneurial environments ahead This book addresses the urgent need for community colleges to prioritize entrepreneurship education both to remain relevant in a changing economy and to give graduate students the flexible and interdisciplinary mindsets needed for the future of society It argues that entrepreneurial education should be offered broadly to a wide range of students and across all disciplines defines the key constructs for achieving this objective and describes how to create entrepreneurial learning environments The expert contributors with the support of the National Association for Community College Entrepreneurship NACCE start from the premise that community colleges are uniquely positioned to lead entrepreneurial initiatives through both internally generated curriculum design and through collaboration with the local entrepreneurial community to build bridges between the classroom to the community which in turn can offer models of implementation and constitute a network or support system for students Community colleges can become incubators of innovation a magnet for talent and provide the impetus for development strategies that their communities have not begun to realize As the chapters make clear developing an entrepreneurial program itself requires an entrepreneurial mindset that transcends any lack of resources requiring a spirit of imagination and resourcefulness This book takes the reader on a journey through the steps needed to build a meaningful relevant and sustainable entrepreneurship program covering program development curriculum design appropriate pedagogical approaches and community engagement

Sustainability and the Social Fabric Clio Padovani, Paul Whittaker, 2017-09-07 While the topic of sustainability in textile manufacture has been the subject of considerable research much of this is limited to a focus on materials and practices and their ecological impact Padovani and Whittaker offer a unique exploration of the textile industry in Europe from the perspective of social sustainability shifting the focus from the materiality of textile production to the industry's relationships with the communities from which the products originate. Featuring six in-depth case studies from design entrepreneurs, artisans, and textile businesses around Europe from Harris Tweed in Scotland to luxury woollen mills in Italy, Sustainability and the Social Fabric explores how new centres of textile manufacturing have emerged from the economic decline in 2008, responding creatively and producing socially inclusive approaches to textile production. Case studies each represent a different approach to social sustainability and are supported by interviews with industry leaders and comparisons to the global textile industry. Demonstrating how some companies are rebuilding the local social fabric to encourage consumer participation through education, enterprise, health, and wellbeing, the book suggests innovative business models that are economically successful and also in turn support wider societal issues. Essential reading for students of textiles, fashion design, and related subjects, this book will demonstrate how a business ecosystem that focuses on inclusive growth and social innovation can lead to sustained mutual benefit for textile industries and their local communities.

Technology, Innovation, and Southern Industrialization Susanna Delfino, Michele Gillespie, 2008. Because of its strong agrarian roots, the South has typically been viewed as a region not favorably disposed to innovation and technology. Yet innovation was never absent from industrialization in this part of the United States. From the early nineteenth century onward, southerners were as eager as other Americans to embrace technology as a path to modernity. This volume features seven essays that range widely across the region and its history from the antebellum era to the present to assess the role of innovations presumed lacking by most historians. Offering a challenging interpretation of industrialization in the South, these writings show that the benefits of innovations had to be carefully weighed against the costs to both industry and society. The essays consider a wide range of innovative technologies. Some examine specific industries in subregions: steamboats in the lower Mississippi valley; textile manufacturing in Georgia and Arkansas; coal mining in Virginia; and sugar planting and processing in Louisiana. Others consider the role of technology in South Carolina textile mills around the turn of the twentieth century; the electrification of the Tennessee valley; and telemedicine in contemporary Arizona, marking the expansion of the region into the southwestern Sunbelt. Together, these articles show that southerners set significant limitations on what technological innovations they were willing to adopt, particularly in a milieu where slaveholding agriculture had shaped the allocation of resources. They also reveal how scarcity of capital and continued reliance on agriculture influenced that allocation into the twentieth century, relieved eventually by federal spending during the Depression and its aftermath that sparked the Sunbelt South's economic boom. Technology, Innovation, and Southern Industrialization clearly demonstrates that the South's embrace of technological innovation in the modern era doesn't mark a radical change from the past but rather signals that such pursuits were always part of the region's economy. It deflates the myth of southern agrarianism while expanding the scope of antebellum American industrialization beyond the Northeast and offers new insights into the relationship of southern economic history to the region's society and politics.
