Environment And The Developing World:

The Developing World and the Environment Rajendra Ramlogan, 2004-09-28 The seeds of the demise of many early civilizations Mesopotamian Greek Roman and Mayan found fertile ground in environmental conflicts The roots of environmental crises are also embedded in the industrial revolution the advent of the age of science and technology urbanization changes in agriculture the population explosion and the rise in consumerism It is no surprise that even today the global village is highly concerned with the issue of environmentalism In this study author Rajendra Ramlogan calls for a re examination of the legal and institutional framework for protection of the global environment within the context of the special needs of the developing world This unique third world perspective on international environmental law is suitable for college level courses

Green Development William Mark Adams, 2001 This revised and updated new edition retains the clear and powerful argument which characterized the original It gives a valuable analysis of the theory and practice of sustainable development and suggests that at the start of the new millennium we should think radically about the challenge of sustainability Fully revised this latest edition includes further reading chapter outlines chapter summaries and new discussion topics and explores the roots of sustainable development thinking and its evolution in the last three decades of the twentieth century the dominant ideas within mainstream sustainable development the nature and diversity of alternative ideas about sustainability the problems of environmental degradation and the environmental impacts of development strategies for building sustainability in development from above and below Offering a synthesis of theoretical ideas on sustainability based on the industrialized economies of the North and the practical applied ideas in the South which tend to ignore First World theory this important text gives a clear discussion of theory and extensive practical insights drawn from Africa Latin America and Asia

Environment and the Developing World Avijit Gupta, Mukul G. Asher, 1998-08-04 Most of the developing countries are located near the tropics which determine the success or failure of sustainable development strategies in these regions This environmental study focuses on the developing world integrating physical biological discussion with social development analysis It discusses project evaluation techniques practiced by the UNDP and the World Bank two agencies that sponsor a number of development projects It aims to introduce economic and political issues to students with an environmental science background and links environmental and development considerations in the context of the Third World

Environment and Industry in Developing Countries Ralph Andrew Luken, Frank Van Rompaey, 2007-01-01 This impressive study compares the adoption of environmentally sound technology in industrial sectors in eight developing countries In combining a variety of quantitative and qualitative methodologies on rich empirical data the authors open the technological change black box and are able to formulate clear conclusions on the drivers and barriers for technological change A major contribution to better understanding and governing environmentally sound technological change Arthur P J Mol Wageningen University The Netherlands All theory is gray but the golden tree of life springs ever green says Goethe This book is very green that is empirical about a green topic the adoption of environmentally sound technologies in developing countries using triangulation for assessing the factors behind such choices A very nice study on an important topic Ren Kemp UNU MERIT Maastricht The Netherlands Industries located in developing countries have made major improvements in environmental performance since the Rio Earth Summit of 1992 More specifically their record in reducing energy use and water pollutant intensities has been better than developed countries This significant new book investigates what motivates industries in developing countries to adopt environmentally sound technology EST a subject about which very little is actually known The authors present the findings of a United Nations study of the factors that determined EST adoption by 105 manufacturing plants in four different sectors within eight developing countries They explore both factors internal to the plants as well as external factors including governments markets and civil society Environment and Industry in Developing Countries will be of great interest to development assistance agencies supporting programmes for industrial environmental management in developing countries and also to graduate school programmes in economic development technology management as well as in international business Globalization, Political Institutions and the Environment in Developing Countries Gabriele Spilker, 2013 Why are some developing countries more willing or able to take care of their environment than others In this volume Gabriele Spilker proposes two factors for the differences in developing countries environmental performance integration into the international system and domestic political institutions Adding a new dimension to the existing body of research on environmental quality and commitment Spilker convincingly demonstrates how international and domestic political factors interact to shape developing countries ability and willingness to care for their natural environment Environment and Aquaculture in Developing Countries Roger S. V. Pullin, H. Rosenthal, John L. Maclean, 1993 Globalization and Adherence to Standard of Environment Impact Assessment in Developing Countries especially in India Dr. Tabassum Sheikh, 2017-12-20 Globalisation has created opportunities for development options Environment Impact Assessment ascertains sites for location development project to design new and more effective pollution abatement devices and to keep pollution below the maximum permissible limit and in realizing ethical norms to keep the environment pure and clean The aim of this book is to find out whether the Indian Government has been able to prepare a checklist and act as a watchdog on International Projects in India as to whether International standards are being maintained here Ecological Policy and Politics in Developing Countries Uday Desai, 1998-04-16 Examines in depth the ecological problems policies and politics of ten major developing countries

Sustainable Real Estate in the Developing World Raymond Talinbe Abdulai, Kwasi Gyau Baffour Awuah, 2021-03-29 Sustainable Real Estate in the Developing World offers a perfect and ideal synthesis of works that examine sustainability within various facets of real estate and urban development in the developing world A must read for academics researchers policy makers and students in all the built environment disciplines Environmental Impacts of Tourism in Developing Nations Sharma, Ravi,Rao, Prakash,2018-09-07 In the face of rapid industrialisation in the last few decades the tourism economy has blossomed into a major industry with positive impacts such as economic growth infrastructure development employment and income generation However tourism brings negative environmental effects such as degradation of landscapes and habitats increased vulnerability of avifauna and wildlife and pollution leading to the decline of species Environmental Impacts of Tourism in Developing Nations is a pivotal reference source that explores some of the critical challenges faced in the tourism economy particularly with regard to the impacts on the environment in developing nations It also explores the impact tourism plays in the biophysical environment such as the issue of climate change While highlighting topics such as environmental justice ecosystems and ecotourism this book is ideally designed for academicians policymakers environmentalists tourism professionals and graduate level students seeking current research on the environmental and economic impacts of tourism Climate Change and Developing Countries Nijavalli H. Ravindranath,Jayant A.

Sathaye,2005-12-16 Among global environmental issues climate change has received the largest attention of national and global policy makers researchers industry multilateral banks and NGOs Climate change is one of the most important global environmental problems with unique characteristics It is global long term up to several centuries and involves complex interactions between climatic environmental economic political institutional and technological pressures It is of great significance to developing countries as all the available knowledge suggests that they and particularly their poorer inhabitants are highly vulnerable to climate impacts The projected warming of 1.4 to 5.8 C by 2100 and the related changes in rainfall pattern rise in sea level and increased frequency of extreme events such as drought hurricanes and storms are likely to threaten food security increase fresh water scarcity lead to decline in biodiversity increase occurrence of vector borne diseases cause flooding of coastal settlements etc Recognizing the potential threat of severe disruptions the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development was organized in 1992 in Rio de Janeiro Brazil to begin to address ways to reduce these impacts which led to the formulation of the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change This Convention and the subsequent Kyoto Protocol recognize the common but differentiated responsibility of developing and industrialized countries in addressing climate change Developing countries thus have a unique role to play in formulating a sound reasoned and well informed response to the threat of climate change Green Development Bill Adams,2019-12-05

The concept of sustainability lies at the core of the challenge of environment and development and the way governments business and environmental groups respond to it Green Development provides a clear and coherent analysis of sustainable development in both theory and practice Green Development explores the origins and evolution of mainstream thinking about sustainable development and offers a critique of the ideas behind them It draws a link between theory and practice by discussing the nature of the environmental degradation and the impacts of development It argues that ultimately green development has to be about political economy about the distribution of power and not about environmental quality Its focus is strongly on the developing world The fourth edition retains the broad structure of previous editions but has been updated to reflect advances in ideas and changes in international policy Greater attention has been given to the political ecology of development market based and neoliberal environmentalism and degrowth This fully revised edition discusses the origins of thinking about sustainability and sustainable development and its evolution to the present day the ideas that dominate mainstream sustainable development including natural capital the green economy market environmentalism and ecological modernisation critiques of mainstream ideas and of neoliberal framings of sustainability and alternative ideas about sustainability that challenge business as usual thinking such as arguments about limits to growth and calls for degrowth the dilemmas of sustainability in the context of forests desertification food and farming biodiversity conservation and dam construction the challenge of policy choices about sustainability particularly between reformist and radical responses to the contemporary global dilemmas Green Development offers clear insights into the challenges of environmental sustainability and social and economic development It is unique in offering a synthesis of theoretical ideas on sustainability and in its coverage of the extensive literature on environment and development around the world The book has proved its value to generations of students as an authoritative thought provoking and readable guide to the field of sustainable development

Economic Values and the Environment in the Developing World ,1997 The authors argue that economic valuation has just as important a role to play in the developing as in the developed world in valuing environmental resources and change Additionally the information which such techniques provide is invaluable when helping to devise sound environmental policies

Environmental Law in Developing Countries Marianela Cedeño Bonilla,2004 This book contains a selection of papers on various legal issues of interest to developing countries which have been prepared by Fellows from InWent who came to Germany between 2002 and 2004 from Africa Asia and Latin America to research and write about subjects of their choice at the IUCN Environmental Law Centre

Politics and Society in the Developing World Peter Calvert,Susan Calvert,2014-06-03 In a world seemingly surfing a wave of unprecedented affluence it is sobering to be reminded that only thirty out of nearly two hundred countries can really be classified as advanced industrialized countries Eighty per cent of the world's population lives in the developing world This popular concise introduction scrutinises the developing world its varied political institutions and the key social economic and environmental issues at the heart of contemporary debates Wide ranging and clearly written Politics and Society in the Developing World begins by providing a brisk survey of the major theoretical and methodological interpretations of the social impact of development It then details the factors which determine the parameters of the developing world before moving on to examine its infrastructure and the crises currently facing it The book also covers the social and economic contexts of developing societies the international arena and its impact on the developing world state building and the tension between dictatorship and democratization The book focuses on four policy areas aid trade tourism and the environment
