the 100 members of the study during summer and winter months. The first 50 members were interviewed during the summer months (June to August) and the second 50 members were interviewed during the winter months (December to February). The study was approved by the ethics committee of the University of Illinois at Chicago.

His observations and theories have not only changed the way we see the natural world, but continue to change. The history and evolution of his theories, as important to the history of the world, encompasses many of the defining changes of the environment, not only in the theory and theory itself, but also, especially in the present and future, with the future.

the American Civil War, and the American West. The American West was a land of opportunity, a land of adventure, a land of discovery. It was a land where the frontiers were being pushed back, where the wilderness was being tamed, where the American dream was being realized. The American West was a land of hope, a land of promise, a land of possibility. It was a land where the future was being created, where the American dream was being built, where the American West was being born.
