High Performance Government Structure Leadership And Incentives:

High-Performance Government: Structure, Leadership, Incentives, 2005 When we think about the performance of our government we tend to focus on four questions 1 Who should our political leaders be 2 What policies should be chosen 3 How big should the government be 4 How can public managers do better given the organizations they inhabit the personnel rules they face and their incentives for performance or lack thereof Each of these questions is vital But focusing only on them can lead us to ignore some deep causes of underperformance those given in the fourth question organizations poorly aligned to their missions malfunctioning systems for selecting leaders and ineffective or perverse incentive systems This book incites us and invites us to address these deep causes of underperformance Chapter 2 is the report of the Volcker Commission a devastating nonpartisan indictment of public service in America Low performance government provides too little service for too much money Breakdowns and failures are a serious risk if not already widespread The Volcker Commission is a call to action the most important critique of the federal government since at least the 1980s The rest of the chapters ask us to consider new approaches to structure leadership and incentives The authors are researchers at the RAND Corporation most of them are also professors at the Pardee RAND Graduate School In the past 15 years they and other RAND researchers have produced more than a thousand studies of public management across an array of government agencies In this book the authors step back from specific research findings to address the Volcker Commission's deep questions How might structural reforms be successfully undertaken What practical steps would result in better leaders How can we create performance driven flexible public agencies

High-Performance Government Robert Klitgaard, Paul C. Light, John Dumond, 2005-03-24 In 2003 the National Commission on the Public Service chaired by Paul Volcker issued a report detailing problems within the federal government today and recommending changes in its organization leadership and operations This book suggests practical ways to implement the recommendations and defines a research agenda for the future Thirteen essays address the primary problem areas identified by the Volcker Commission and the commission report itself is included

Governing for the Future Jonathan Boston,2016-11-09 The book focuses on how to enhance the political incentives on democratically elected governments to protect the interests of future generations Paying Our High Public Officials Teun J. Dekker,2013-01-17 In almost every liberal democratic society an issue that is a topic of constant and passionate public discussion is how much that country s ministers legislators senior civil servants and senior judges should be paid Nor is this surprising the issue has considerable voyeuristic appeal particular democratic significance and important ramifications for the functioning of the public sector as a whole However like most political debates these discussions tend to be messy fragmented and full of unverified assertions and spurious appeals to populist sentiment It is hardly surprising that those discussions rarely succeed in putting the matter to rest Paying Our High Public Officials examines the political discourse concerning this question in 17 liberal democracies Canada the United States Mexico Norway Finland the Netherlands the United Kingdom Ireland Germany Austria Switzerland France Poland Italy Hong Kong Singapore and New Zealand Based on many hundreds of parliamentary debates newspaper articles speeches as well as reports by think tanks and high commissions of state the book identifies seven central arguments that occur in all these societies translates them into the language of analytical philosophy and then rigorously evaluates them This approach contributes to a better understanding of this controversy and may result in better justified and more legitimate conclusions concerning which policy to adopt
