craftsman whose works were influenced by the Victorian era's drive for empirical knowledge and discovery. His dedication to chronicling the complexities of South Australian history was likely driven by the era's ethos which saw the recording of colonization and development of the British Empire as a moral duty and a significant intellectual pursuit. Hodder's personal investment in the subject matter is evident as he illuminates the myriad challenges and triumphs faced in the journey of South Australia's growth. The History of South Australia Volume II is recommended for scholars, students, and history enthusiasts who are keen to delve into the intricate fabric of Australia's past. Hodder's comprehensive account is a cornerstone for anyone seeking to understand the evolution of South Australia within the broader narrative of Australian development. It's a seminal work that presents a lucid and enlightening exploration of the region's past, an exceptional read for those who appreciate history rendered with both passion and pedagogical integrity. A History of Regional

Commercial Television in Australia Michael Thurlow, 2023-02-14. This book is the first history of commercial television in regional Australia where diverse communities are spread across vast distances and multiple time zones. The first station GLV Latrobe Valley began broadcasting in December 1961. By the late 1970s there were 35 independent commercial stations throughout regional Australia from Cairns in the far north east to Bunbury in the far south west. Based on fine-grained archival research and extensive interviews, the book examines the key political, regulatory, economic, technological, industrial, and social developments which have shaped the industry over the past 60 years. Regional television is often dismissed as a mere extension of or footnote to the development of Australia's three metropolitan commercial television networks. Michael Thurlow's study reveals an industry which at its peak was at the economic and social heart of regional communities, employing thousands of people and providing vital programming for viewers in provincial cities and small towns across Australia.
