day 1

Mini Lesson: Introduce making connections using the anchor chart. Explain to students that by making connections, they use their background knowledge to understand what they read. Explain that there are three types of connections. Briefly state the three connections, then tell students that today they are going to be focusing on making text-to-self connections.

Interactive Read Aloud: Read Alexandar and the Terrible, Horrible, No Good, Very Bad Day. Prior to the lesson determine what interactive activity you want students to complete during the read aloud. Explain that you are going to read aloud the book and you will be stopping periodically to make connections. As you are reading, use the stop and interact prompts to create discussion and add information to the graphic organizer or flip flap.

Independent Reading: Provide students with the choice board. Have students complete one square on the choice board.

Mini Lesson: Review the anchor chart from the day before. Remind students that by making connections, they use their background knowledge to understand what they read. Explain yesterday they practiced making text-to-self connections, and while you read aloud today, since they are good readers, they will be making text-to-self connections, but you want them to focus on text-to-text connections.

Interactive Read Aloud: Read The Relatives Came. Prior to the lesson determine what interactive activity you want students to complete during the read aloud. Explain that you are going to read aloud the book and you will be stopping periodically to make connections. As you are reading, use the stop and interact prompts to create discussion and for students to add information to their graphic organizer or flip flap.

Independent Reading: Provide students with the choice board. Have students complete one square on the choice board.

Closing: Allow a few students to share their response or do a "Hand-up, Pair-up" which provides all students an opportunity to share.
