Different approaches have been conducted to analyse the interactions of the different belief systems in the early medieval world This book assesses the relationship between clerics and Scandinavian influenced laity in the Irish Sea area through the placement of furnished graves at or near ecclesiastical sites in the ninth through the eleventh centuries Other areas of funerary studies have moved beyond a dichotomy of Christianity and paganism acknowledging that practices can be multifaceted Yet statements regarding Viking Age furnished graves in or near ecclesiastical sites are still not as pervasively open to this line of thinking To bridge this gap this book delves into the historiography and context of the burial practices through multidisciplinary analysis The ecclesiastical sites and furnished graves of the eastern southwest Scotland and northwest England central Isle of Man and western Ireland and Northern Ireland Irish Sea areas are then examined using various sources to understand their contexts and relationships In the final chapters the sites and graves are brought together to identify any trends any unique circumstances that led to local variances and their fit into the larger picture Viking Age furnished graves can be seen as an acceptable variation among an array of burial practices and the relationship between the clergy and laity is far more complex and closely tied than has been portrayed Viking and Ecclesiastical Interactions in the

Irish Sea Area from the 9th to 11th Centuries will appeal to students and scholars alike interested in the history of the Vikings in the British Irish Isles and their relationships with ecclesiastical institutions The Historical Records of the Fifth (Royal Irish) Lancers from Their Foundation as Wynne's Dragoons, in 1689, to the Present Day Walter Temple Willcox, 1908 Social Housing in Ireland Tony Fahey, 1999 This study explores the living conditions and quality of life in seven urban local authority housing estates in Ireland The research team involved paid particular attention to the perspective of the residents in each estate their views about what made their neighbourhoods good or bad places to live and what they had to say about their relationships with local service agencies and local authorities in particular
