Whitethorn Jacqueline Osherow, 2011-02-07 In Poem for Jenne which opens Jacqueline Osherow's ambitious and challenging new collection a neighbor has planted larkspur and delphinium in the poet's yard and is tending them hoping to bring color and light into a household stricken by personal tragedy As the bright blue star shaped flowers bloom for a second time the poet writes earth's reaching for her heavens I for words or any chink of rapture I can claim The pervasive theme in this poem and throughout Whitethorn is that human suffering may be irremediable yet in nature and language one may find a key to unlock the mysteries of sorrow Osherow searches for that cipher by exploring a range of suffering from the personal to the historical and cultural In the poem Orders of Infinity she visits Treblinka and in her inability to count the stones or quantify the real loss of the Holocaust ponders the impossibility of imagining the unborn generations of the victims descendants an infinity of lives not lived undreamed daydreams mute conversations ungratified indulgences failed hints In Whitethorn a book of enormous scope and emotional intelligence Osherow unflinchingly examines the pain of her own personal history and courageously probes the greater mystery of evil and suffering in the world

I'd Like Amanta Michalopoulou, 2008 The thirteen short stories that make up Amanda Michalopoulou's I'd Like read like versions of an unwritten novel each riveting tale resonates with the others and yet a sense of their connectedness remains tantalizingly out of grasp Instead we are presented with a kaleidoscope of characters and events signs and emotions linked by the uncanny repetition of certain details blossoming almond trees red berets bleeding feet accidents small and large Michalopoulou's characters are both patently fictitious and profoundly real as they move through a world in which even the smallest of everyday occurrences can take on enormous significance Engagingly fresh in its approach I'd Like offers a touching utterly unique reading experience from one of Greece's most innovative young storytellers
