Structure examines the politics of contemporary political drama. It traces the origins of the contemporary British political play to the emergence of the idea of serious drama in the late 19th century through the work of Bernard Shaw and argues that a Shavian version of serious drama was inextricably linked to the social and political structures of British society at the time. While political drama is still often thought of as adhering to a Shavian model in which social issues are presented through a dialectical structure, Grochala argues that the different political structures of contemporary Britain give rise to formally inventive dramaturgies that are no less serious or political than their Shavian forebears. Through analysing the experimental dramaturgies of contemporary plays by playwrights including Caryl Churchill, Simon Stephens, Anthony Neilson, Debbie Tucker Green and Mark Ravenhill among others, it offers a set of new principles for understanding how a play functions politically and reveals how today the dramaturgical structure of a play is as political as its content.

Dynamics Of Role-Playing In Jacobean Tragedy Joan L. Hall, 1991-10-23 Jacobean actors fascinated audiences with their convincingly mimetic performances; often they appeared to assume the identities of the fictional characters they impersonated. A similar dynamic emerges in several tragedies of the period where dramatic characters are frequently changed for better or worse by the roles they adopt within the play illusion. This study discusses how certain plays of Jonson and Middleton reveal the destructive consequences of assuming new personae; how three of Shakespeare's tragedies explore the ambivalent results of characters' experimentation with roles; and how Webster and Ford treat role playing, including ceremonial behavior, creatively as a vehicle for expressing and consolidating the dramatic self.
