The Jig of Forslin, a Symphony. By Conrad Aiken Conrad Aiken,1953

The Jig of Forslin Conrad Aiken,1900      The Jig of Forslin; a Symphony Conrad Aiken,2013-09 This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book without typos from the publisher Not indexed Not illustrated 1916 edition Excerpt And laughter of virgins I blew the light And followed her heedless of the ending Into the carnival of that night Make haste beloved the night passes The day breaks the cock crows Mist slinks away in the sunlight And the thin blood drips from the rose Black stallions rushed us through the air Their hooves upon the wind struck fire Rivers and hills and a moonlit spire Glided beneath us and then a flare Of gusty torches beckoned us down To a palace gate in a darkened town She took my hand and led me in Through walls of basalt and walls of jade And I wondered to hear a violin Sweetly within that marble played I heard it sing a wandering tone Imprisoned forever in that deep stone And then upon a coach we lay And heard invisible spirits play A ghostly music the candles muttered Rose leaves trembled upon the floor Lay still or rose on the air and fluttered And while the moon went dwindling down Poisoning with black web the skies She narrowed her eyelids and fixed her eyes Fiercely upon me and searched me so With speeding fire in every shred That I consumed with a witching glow Knew scarcely if I were alive or dead But lay upon her breast and kissed The deep red mouth and drank the breath And heard it gasping how it hissed To mimic the ecstasy of death Above us in a censer burning Was dust of lotos flowers and there Ghosts of smoke were ever turning And gliding along the sleepy air And reaching hands and showing faces Or coiling slowly like blue snakes To charm us moveless in our places But then she softly raised her head And smiled through brooding eyes and said O lover I have seen you twice You changed my veins to veins of ice The first time it was Easter Eve By the church door you      JIG OF FORSLIN Conrad

Conrad Aiken Edward Butscher,2010-06-01 The first of a planned two volume biography Conrad Aiken Poet of White Horse Vale follows Aiken's early life from his birth in 1889 to 1925 when he stood on the threshold of both nervous breakdown and poetic success It was then that Aiken began to face his paradoxically idyllic and tragic Savannah childhood and to confront the events of February 27 1901 On that day the eleven year old Aiken heard gunshots punctuate a nightlong argument between his mother and father Running into the next room he discovered his mother murdered and his father dead by suicide Sounding the deep reverberations of those events in Aiken's mind Edward Butscher follows the poet's life and work as he sought to regain in some permanent form the idyll he had lost as a child Butscher tells of Aiken's determined efforts to gain recognition for his verse in the fevered cultural circuits of the early twentieth century from his friendship begun at Harvard with T S Eliot through frustrating excursions into the literary society of England and repeated trips on the poetic trade route from his home in Boston to Chicago and New York to often sharp encounters with such powerful cultural barons as Ezra Pound Amy Lowell and Harriet Monroe Hoping to build his reputation on a series of detached poetic symphonies to keep depression from boiling over into madness and suicide Aiken skirted the border of his deepest memories and fears a border he would cross in the works that lay ahead
