Practical Guide to French Business Jon Alston, Voici! Jacqueline Gonthier,1998 Advanced French Grammar Monique L'Huillier,1999-06-17 This 1999 reference grammar written for advanced students of French their teachers and others who want a better understanding of the French language combines the best of modern and traditional approaches Its objective is not only practical mastery of the language but familiarity with its structure Taking into account modern linguistic research Advanced French Grammar approaches the French language primarily through the study of syntactic structures but without excessive emphasis on formalism It provides a generous number of examples based on the author s own experience of teaching French to English speakers to help the student to understand the different meanings of apparently similar syntactic alternatives The norms of correct expression are given together with current usage and deviations and appendixes provide information on the 1990 spelling reforms and on numbers A substantial index of French and English words and of topics provides easy access to the text itself French for adults Charles Duff,1952 Lexical Tone Perception in Infants and Young Children: Empirical studies and theoretical perspectives Leher Singh,Denis Burnham,Jessica Hay,Liquan Liu,Karen Mattock,2019-11-20 In psycholinguistic research there has traditionally been a strong emphasis on understanding how particular language types of are processed and learned In particular Romance and Germanic languages e g English French German have until recently received more attention than other types such as Chinese languages This has led to selective emphasis on the phonological building blocks of European languages consonants and vowels to the exclusion of lexical tones which like consonants and vowels determine lexical meaning but unlike consonants and vowels are based on pitch variations Lexical tone is pervasive it is used in at least half of the world languages Maddieson 2013 e g most Asian and some African Central American and European languages This Research Topic brings together a collection of recent empirical research on the processing and representation of lexical tones across the lifespan with an emphasis on advancing knowledge on how tone systems are acquired The articles focus on various aspects of tone early perception of tones influences of tone on word learning the acquisition of new tone systems and production of tones One set of articles report on tone perception at the earliest stage of development in infants learning either tone or non tone languages Tsao and Chen et al demonstrate that infants sensitivity to Mandarin lexical tones as well as pitch improves over the first year of life in native and non native learners in contrast to traditional accounts of perceptual narrowing for consonants and vowels Gtz et al report a different pattern of perception for Cantonese tones and further demonstrate influences of methodological approaches on infants tone sensitivity Fan et al demonstrate that sensitivity to less well studied properties of tone languages such as neutral tone may develop after the first year of life Cheng and Lee ask a similar question in an electrophysiological study and report effects of stimulus salience on infants neural response to native tones In a complementary set of studies focused on tone sensitivity in word learning Burnham et al demonstrate that infants bind tones to newly learned words if they are learning a tone language either monolingually or bilingually although it was also found that object word binding was influenced by the properties of individual tones Liu and Kager chart a developmental trajectory over the second year of life in which infants narrow in their interpretation of non native tones Choi et al investigate how learning a tone language can influence uptake of other suprasegmental properties of language such as stress and demonstrate that native tone sensitivity in children can facilitate stress sensitivity when learning a stress based language Finally two studies focus on sensitivity to pitch in a sub class tone languages pitch accent languages In a study on Japanese children s abilities to recognise words they know Ota et al demonstrate a limited sensitivity to native pitch contrasts in toddlers In contrast Ramachers et al demonstrate comparatively strong sensitivity to pitch in native and non native speakers of a different pitch accent system Limburghian when learning new words Several studies focus on learning new tone systems In a training study with school aged children Kasisopa et al demonstrate that tone language experience increases children s abilities to learn new tone contrasts Poltrock et al demonstrate similar advantages of tone experience in learning new tone systems in adults And in an electrophysiological study Liu et al demonstrate order effects in adults neural responses to new tones discussing implications for learning tone languages as an adult Finally Hannah et al demonstrate that extralinguistic cues such as facial expression can support adults learning of new tone systems In three studies investigating tone production Rattansone et al report the results of a study demonstrating kindergartners asynchronous mastery of tones delayed acquisition of tone sandhi forms relative to base forms In a study interrogating a corpus of adult tone production Han et al demonstrate that mothers produce tones in a distinct manner when speaking to infants tone differences are emphasised more when speaking to infants than to adults Combining perception and production of tones Wong et al report asynchronous development of tone perception and tone production in children The Research Topic also includes a series of Opinion pieces and Commentaries addressing the broader relevance of tone and pitch to the study of language acquisition Curtin and Werker discuss ways in which tone can be integrated into their model of infant language development PRIMIR Best discusses the phonological status of lexical tones and considers how recent empirical research on tone perception bears on this question Kager focuses on how language learners distinguish lexical tones from other sources of pitch variation e g affective and pragmatic that also inform language comprehension Finally Antoniou and Chin unite evidence of tone sensitivity from children and adults and discuss how these areas of research can be mutually informative Psycholinguistic studies of lexical tone acquisition have burgeoned over the past 13 years This collection of empirical studies and opinion pieces provides a state of the art panoply of the psycholinguistic study of lexical tones and demonstrate its coming of age The articles in this Research Topic will help address the hitherto Eurocentric non tone language research emphasis and will contribute to an expanding narrative of speech perception speech production and language acquisition that includes all of the world s languages Importantly these studies underline the scientific promise of drawing from tone languages in psycholinguistic research the research questions raised by lexical tone are unique and distinct from those typically applied to more widely studied languages and populations The comprehensive study of language acquisition can only benefit from this expanded focus

The Categorization of Spatial Entities in Language and Cognition Michel Aurnague, Maya Hickmann, Laure Vieu, 2007-04-18 Despite a growing interest for space in language most research has focused on spatial markers specifying the static or dynamic relationships among entities verbs prepositions postpositions case markings Little attention has been paid to the very properties of spatial entities their status in linguistic descriptions and their implications for spatial cognition and its development in children This topic is at the center of this book that opens a new field by sketching some major theoretical and methodological directions for future research on spatial entities Brought together linguistic descriptions of spatial systems formal accounts of linguistic data and experimental findings from psycholinguistic studies all couched within a wide cross linguistic perspective Such an interdisciplinary approach provides a rich overview of the many questions that remain unanswered in relation to spatial entities while also throwing a new light on previous research focusing on related topics concerning space and or the relation between language and cognition The Construal of Spatial Meaning Carita Paradis, Jean Hudson, Ulf Magnusson, 2013-04-25 This book considers how language users express and understand literal and metaphorical spatial meaning not only in language but also through gesture and pointing Researchers explore the ways in which theoretical developments in language and cognition new empirical techniques and new computational facilities have led to a greater understanding of the relationship between physical space and mental space as expressed in human communication European Nutrition and Health Report 2004 I. Elmadfa, Elisabeth Weichselbaum, 2005-01-01 The European Nutrition and Health Report is the first comprehensive assessment of the present status of nutrition and health in Europe and of the available resources and requirements for compatible and representative data from different countries 13 EU member states and Norway have participated in this project pursuing three main goals Compilation of available nutrient intake and health data Identification of major nutrition and health problems Identification of problems concerning the methods and compatibility of data collection The main topics include food supply and availability energy and nutrient intake in different age groups health indicators and status obesity physical activity and smoking The Appendix offers a detailed publication of national reports and single projects This book provides a solid basis for the planning of future projects in nutrition and health and should be of great interest to all professionals in the fields of nutrition preventive medicine and public health as well as to health policy makers Early Child Development in the French Tradition Andre Vyt, Henriette Bloch, Marc H. Bornstein, 2013-05-13 This volume shares significant contemporary Francophone contributions to developmental psychology outside geographic and intellectual borders of French speaking countries Except for the spread of Piagetian theory after World War II into Anglophone psychology these new publications have not become so well known worldwide as progress in Francophone developmental psychology warrants However the work of a new generation of developmental theorists and experimentalists continues to shape important and original lines of thinking and research in France Canada and in other French speaking countries This work also contributes uniquely to issues such as sensori motor development perception language acquisition social interaction and the growth and induction of cognitive mechanisms Scientific concepts are not only embedded in a paradigm but also in a culture and a language Instead of writing about Francophone developmental psychology from outside this volume brings together original English language contributions written by researchers working in different Francophone countries Chapters summarize and interpret research on a given topic making explicit the context of philosophical and theoretical traditions in which the empirical advances are embedded Original essays are accompanied by editorial commentaries from eminent scientists working on the same topics in other parts of the world topics that are closely related to Francophone streams of thought and themes of study Together these essays fully and faithfully represent modern scientific perspectives toward understanding many facets of mental growth and development of the young child      Language

Acquisition across Linguistic and Cognitive Systems Michèle Kail, Maya Hickmann, 2010-12-15 How and why do all children learn language Why do some have difficulties while others are early language learners What are the consequences of early bilingualism Is it possible to reach native like competence in a foreign language Although we still cannot fully answer these questions research during the last two decades has begun to solve some pieces of the puzzle This book proposes an interdisciplinary collection of writings from some of the best specialists across several fields in cognitive science offering a wide sample of recent advances in the study of first language acquisition bilingualism second language acquisition and disorders of oral language It is addressed to all researchers and students interested in language acquisition as well as to teachers clinicians and parents who will find therein many new findings and varied methodological approaches as well as challenging questions that are still debated and in need of further research      OECD Economic Surveys: France 2015

Acquisition Anne-Katharina Harr, 2012-12-06 A growing number of studies have begun to examine the influence of language specific factors on language acquisition During language acquisition German children from six years on use structures that are similar to those of adults in their language group and also encode all semantic components from an early age In striking contrast French children up to ten years have difficulties producing some of the complex structures that are necessary for the simultaneous expression of several semantic components Nonetheless in addition to these striking cross linguistic differences the results of this study also clearly show similar developmental progressions in other respects suggesting the impact of general developmental determinants      Alsatian Acts of Identity Liliane Mangold Vassberg, 1993 A German dialect spoken in Alsace France has rapidly lost way to French since 1945 This book investigates language choice language attitudes and ethnic identity in Alsace today The Alsatian case study points out the complex interrelationship of linguistic and identity change with historical social and psychological processes      State of Health in the EU France: Country Health
