

The final section, dealing with magical realism and communities, demonstrates how this literary mode often registers the rise and fall of societies instead of the struggles of individuals. The emphasis here is on the deconstruction of colonialism in postcolonial communities, as seen in essays by Stephen Slemon, who focuses on four Canadian writers; John Erickson, who analyzes two North African works of fiction; Melissa Stewart, who examines depictions of city life in works by well-known American writers; and Lois Parkinson Zamora, who compares elements of magical realism—the appearance of ghosts, for example—in American and Latin American literatures. (Again, One Hundred Years of Solitude would seem to represent an excellent example of the category.)

With a total of twenty-three well-written scholarly essays, Magical Realism: Theory, History, Community stands out as a valuable contribution to the definition and discussion of a subject which, until recently, cried out for further exegesis. Now, after the publication of this weighty tome, scholars can no longer complain about a lack of critical understanding of the literary mode so widely known as magical realism. Paris and Zamora are to be highly commended for compiling and contributing their own scholarship to this valuable text.

Reviewed by Doris Y. Kadish

How, from the vantage point of the 1990s, do we assess the significance of the French New Novel and the evolution that the principal new novelists have undergone since writing their most well-known works in the 1960s? Readers seeking answers to these questions will find Raylene L. Ramsey's The French New Autobiographies a useful, thorough, and insightful work. Well written and clearly developed, it provides a sophisticated and theoretically informed treatment of its subject: the semi-autobiographical works written in the 1980s and 1990s by Nathalie Sarraute, Alain Robbe-Grillet, and Marguerite Duras. Although Ramsey focuses primarily on six texts—Enfance and Tu ne l'aimes pas by Sarraute, Le Miroir qui revient and Angélique ou l'enchantement by Robbe-Grillet, Emily L. and L'Amant de la Chine du nord by Duras—her analyses also touch on works by Claude Simon, Roland Barthes, and other writers who similarly interweave their personal histories with French history of the Second World War and the postwar period. Accordingly, Ramsey's work transcends her limited topic of the three writers and six works she has chosen to discuss and assumes broad relevance for the study of the modern French novel and contemporary French literature in general.

French New Autobiographies:

Early Modern French Autobiography Nicolae Alexandru Virastau, 2021-04-06 This book offers a survey of the constitution of the French memoir tradition and explores in detail the works of four representative authors Philippe de Commines Louise de Savoie Philippe de Cheverny and François de Bassompierre Works of self writing were usually printed under the title of memoirs and have been often considered a uniform genre These early forms of self writing were in fact highly heterogeneous works at the crossroads of multiple genres from the account book to the astrological diary Their writing printing and circulation challenge modern notions of autobiographical genres their authorship is often questionable and collective and they tended to be compiled in large collections for political ends without regard to the authors intention

Consuming Autobiographies Claire Boyle, 2017-12-02 Since 1975 French literary writing has been marked by an autobiographical turn which has seen authors increasingly often tap into the vein of what the French term écriture de soi This coincides paradoxically with the death of autobiography as these authors self consciously distance themselves and their writings from conventional autobiography founding a nouvelle autobiographie where the very possibility of autobiographical expression is questioned In the first book length study in English to address this phenomenon Claire Boyle sheds a new light on this hostility toward autobiography through a series of ground breaking studies of estrangement in autobiographical works by major post war authors Nathalie Sarraute Georges Perec Jean Genet and Hélène Cixous She identifies autobiography as a site of conflict between writer and reader as authors struggle to assert the unknowableness of their identity in the face of a readership resolutely desiring privileged knowledge Autobiography emerges as a deeply troubling genre for authors with the reader as an antagonistic consumer of the autobiographical self Catalogue of French Books

Sartori,1999-07-30 The earliest known literary productions by women living in Europe were probably written by French writers As early as the 12th century women troubadours in the south of France were writing poems French women continued writing through the ages their number increasing as education became more available to women of all classes And yet of the great number of works by women writers who preceded the current feminist movement very few have survived A few writers such as Marie de France George Sand and Simone de Beauvoir became part of the canon But critics mostly male had judged the works of only a few women writers worthy of recognition As part of the feminist move to reclaim women writers and to rethink literary history scholars in French literature began to take a new look at women writers who had been popular during their lifetimes but who had not been admitted into the canon This reference book provides extensive information about French women writers and the world in which they lived Included are several hundred alphabetically arranged entries for authors literary genres such as the novel poetry and the short story literary movements such as classicism realism and surrealism life cycle events particular to women such as menstruation and menopause events and institutions which affected women differently than men such as revolutions wars and laws on marriage divorce and education The volume spans French literature from the Middle Ages to the present and covers those writers who lived and worked mainly in France The entries are written by expert contributors and each includes bibliographical information The entries focus on each writer's awareness of how her gender shaped her outlook and opportunities on how categorizations structures and terms used to describe literary works have been defined for women and the ways in which women writers have responded to these definitions The volume begins with a feminist history of French literature and concludes with a selected general bibliography and a chronology of women writers Books and Characters, French & English Lytton Strachey,1922 French Women in Politics: Writing Power Raylene L. Ramsay,2003 Although more women in France have entered political life than ever before the fact remains that there are fewer women representatives in the French parliament than there were after the Second World War In a new and original approach the author presents an overview and analysis of the emerging body of text by or on women who have held high political office in France The argument is that writing about women and politics has not just described or reflected women's slow but now substantial entry into political life it has played a major part in shaping the parity debate and its outcomes Interviews with political women such as Huguette Bouchardeau Simone Veil or Edith Cresson inserted in the text demonstrate the emergence and circulation of a new common discourse focused on the issue of whether women in politics make or should make a difference A close reading of the various texts examined in this book and their connection to new public counter discourses in France suggest that a re writing of power is indeed occurring

Shifting Subjects Natalie Edwards, 2011-04-18 There are many different ways to say I This book examines the ways in which four contemporary women writers Hélène Cixous Assia Djebar Gisèle Halimi and Julia Kristeva have written their autobiographical I as a plural concept These women refuse the individual I of traditional autobiography by developing narrative strategies that multiply the voices in their texts They similarly cast doubt upon current theorizations of the female self in autobiography by questioning the possibility of plural selfhood in narrative and its seemingly cathartic effects Each writer approaches autobiography as a site of catharsis for a specific trauma and each tells her story through multiple narrative voices in order to find atonement The women's experiments with narrative voice are designed to render the female self accurately in narrative but they simultaneously expose the difficulties inherent in writing the self plurally Taken together the women who form the corpus of this study move beyond critics' current understandings of textual representations of selfhood Informed by postcolonial and feminist approaches to selfhood this book charts the history of theories of autobiography and plots new ways of imagining this genre This cross section of international writers calls for a new understanding of the inscription of female identity in narrative not as a binary of individual versus plural selfhood but as a cluster of categories of identity beyond I and we
