Designing Successful Grant Proposals Donald C. Orlich, 2005-03-01 Discover how simple it can be to get the grant money your schools needs following the guidelines and templates provided by an experienced grants writer Graduate Guide to Grants, 1997 Making Arguments Edmond H. Weiss, 2012-04-24 Making Arguments Reason in Context offers a new approach to the teaching of argumentation and debate Nearly all argumentation courses and textbooks tilt toward one of two extremes Critical thinking informal logic in which the laws of reasoning are universal and not affected by audience or context Public speaking in which adaptation to the audience and winning assent trumps logic and reasoning At the first extreme are texts that stress flaws in arguments and how to discern them Their focus tends to be on the logic making deductive inferences and avoiding deductive mistakes or other errors of inference and or the recognition of fallacies deficient or fake arguments They also deal with the messy ambiguities of language Generally this approach omits the concept of an audience And it does not explain how spotting the flaws in reasoning or improving one's reasoning translates into the ability to make an effective argument Further it is not clear how to address audiences whose grasp of logic is shaky At the other extreme are books especially public speaking textbooks that err in the opposite direction They are fixated on audience As a result their advice about how to argue is grounded in audience adaptation In fact the process of reasoning is nearly subordinated to such secondary considerations as style delivery and organization And again the connection between critical thinking logic and audience is rarely examined In Making Arguments we propose to consider argument at the nexus of invention and judgment the two endpoints from which logic and public speaking examine argumentation respectively By looking at the stuff that comes between an argument's design and its delivery we hope to enrich the understanding and the study of argument as both a theoretical and applied discipline In particular we want to answer some questions that are seldom addressed in print What is the starting point for argumentation When do we even need to argue When should one embrace and when should one avoid arguing Why does the same argument work in one place and fail in another Are most audiences capable of understanding a complex argument With what authority can one make an argument absent expertise in the field in which the argument takes place Are there substantive differences between oral and written argument What does it mean to present an argument Can someone control the argumentative situation context to the benefit of his her position How can argument educate and improve the arguer Can we learn the truth by arguing This book addresses the whole advocacy process as a series of concatenated intellectual decisions affecting how arguments are created ordered rendered and produced with judgment as the over arching concern
