Globalization, Information Technology and Development J. Capability Building and Global Innovation

Networks Michael Gastrow, Glenda Kruss, 2017-10-02 This book explores the dynamics of global innovation networks and their implications for development Knowledge is often seen as the main determinant of economic growth competitiveness and employment There is a strong causal interaction between capability building and the growth in demand for and supply of technical and organizational innovation This complex of skills knowledge and innovation holds great potential benefit for development particularly in the context of developing countries However despite evidence of the increasing importance of knowledge and innovation there has been relatively little research to understand the distribution and coordination of innovation and knowledge intensive economic activities on a global scale and what this might mean for economic development Each chapter though sharing an underlying conception of innovation systems innovation networks and their relation to capability building and development takes a different theoretical stance The authors explore the emerging relationship between competence building and the structure of global innovation networks thus providing a valuable new perspective from which to critically assess their development potential This book was originally published as a special issue of Innovation and Development

Global Innovation in Emerging Economies Prasada Reddy, 2011 This title examines the dynamics of the globalisation processes and the emergence of new locations for innovation and its implications Digital Interactions in Developing Countries Jeffrey James, 2013-01-04 Jeffrey James is one of the relatively few academics to have systematically taken on the topic of IT and development In this timely book he undertakes a methodological critique of prominent topics in the debate Challenging the existing literature by international and governmental institutions the book looks not only at the digital divide but also at issues such as digital preparedness leapfrogging and low cost computers James also raises important issues which have been largely neglected in the literature such as the implications for poverty in developing countries and the macroeconomics of mobile phones The book argues that benefits from IT are captured in a different form in developing as opposed to developed countries In the latter gains come from technology ownership and use whereas in the former benefits cannot be captured as much in this way because ownership is more limited Interestingly the author shows that developing countries have responded to this distinction with a series of local innovations which are often low cost and pro poor This finding contradicts the widely held view that poor countries are unable to generate major innovations within their own borders Accessible and clearly written this book will be of great interest to scholars of development economics and development studies and is relevant to both policy makers and academics

Tied In: The Global Network of Local Innovation World Intellectual Property Organization, 2019-11-08 In this paper we exploit a unique and rich dataset of patent applications and scientific publications in order to answer several questions concerned with two current phenomena on the way knowledge is produced and shared worldwide its geographical spread at the international level and its spatial concentration in few worldwide geographical hotspots We find that the production of patents and scientific publications has spread geographically to several countries and has not kept within the traditional knowledge producing economies Western Europe Japan and the U S We observe that part of this partial geographical spread of knowledge activities is due to the setting up of Global Innovation Networks first toward more traditional innovative countries and then towards emerging economies too Yet despite the increasing worldwide spread of knowledge production we do not see the same spreading process within countries and even we see some increased concentration in some of them This may have of course important distributional consequences within countries Moreover these selected areas also concentrate a large and increasing connectivity within their own country to other hotspots and across countries through Global Innovation Networks
