Glossary Of Some Foreignlanguage Terms In Entomology:

A Glossary of Some Foreign-Language Terms in Entomology Ruth O. Ericson, Department of Agriculture, 2004-10-01 Translating scientific papers from foreign languages into English requires more than finding English equivalents in a dictionary Sometimes the foreign words do not appear in the foreign language dictionary or the equivalents cited for them are unsuitable At other times the choice of equivalents is so wide that proper selection of the preferred English term is difficult Dictionaries seldom make shades of meaning clear they can usually be gleaned only from the context of the paper itself from illustrations accompanying it from a knowledge of the insect concerned or by consulting European entomologists familiar with the common words in technical use In older papers on entomology European writers used Latin technical terms in describing the parts of an insect's body as American entomologists still do But in the 1930's many European writers began to replace such technical terms by words from the common speech Instead of the Latin and hence universal abdomen some German writers first adopted Bauch for the third section of an insect body Since this word means abdomen or venter in man it was not precise enough to designate the abdomen in insects Therefore Hinterleib hinder part of the body is now more generally used for abdomen whereas Bauch is employed to mean the venter or sternum of the abdomen in insects in more recent literature These common words tend to be used loosely and inconsistently Of two Russian collaborators in papers on grasshoppers for instance one uses a different Russian word for the sternum and the thorax but the other uses the same Russian word for both Many of these terms are not the ones preferred by European specialists in entomology Many were incorrectly used by amateurs or by entomologists writing in a language other than their own Hence the terms appearing in this Glossary are not necessarily the ones used by the best writers but the equivalents given for them were found to be those best suited for the purpose of a given translation Miss Ericson had completed the manuscript for this glossary but had no opportunity to review the proofs at the time of her death on October 9 1961
