The image shows a rectangular wooden sign with a vertical plank grain. At the top, there is a black silhouette of a house with two windows and a door. The text 'God Bless our Home' is written in a black, elegant script font. The word 'God' is positioned to the right of the house. 'Bless' is the largest word, followed by 'our' in a smaller size, and 'Home' is the largest word at the bottom, featuring a decorative flourish. The bottom right corner of the sign is decorated with a colorful floral pattern, including red and yellow flowers with green leaves. The sign is hanging on a light-colored wall.

Trice,Samuel A. Holland,2017-07-06 This book is a discussion of 75 of the most popular films in America from 1921 through 1999 and the changes that have taken place in how masculinity is portrayed in the movies over that period of time Traditionally in popular films men have met challenging tasks but what they accomplish and how successful they are have been drastically changed since the early 1920s Prior to World War II men were most often presented within the context of a family After the war men were presented as concerned with issues beyond their immediate families and after 1970 they were portrayed as being overwhelmed by their situations Recently popular films have tended to focus on the relationships between men This work documents these changes over eight decades using the movies as vehicles to illustrate the major transformations The Walnut Creek Wish Wanda E. Steadfast in the Faith Morris J. MacGregor, 2006 Often overlooked is the fact that O Boyle's Washington years followed a quarter century of participation in the modernization of the American Church's charity apparatus and the organization of its international relief effort Such assignments placed him at the epicenter of the debate over the proper roles of church and state in providing social services A product of the Catholic ghettoization of the early twentieth century he was expected to lead his Church into fruitful partnerships with government and other organizations in support of society's most needy
