Early Modern Cultures of Translation Karen Newman, Jane Tylus, 2015-07-23 Would there have been a Renaissance without translation Karen Newman and Jane Tylus ask in their Introduction to this wide ranging group of essays on the uses of translation in an era formative for the modern age The early modern period saw cross cultural translation on a massive scale Humanists negotiated status by means of their literary skills as translators of culturally prestigious Greek and Latin texts as teachers of those same languages and as purveyors of the new technologies for the dissemination of writing Indeed with the emergence of new vernaculars and new literatures came a sense of the necessary interactions of languages in a moment that can truly be defined as after Babel As they take their starting point from a wide range of primary sources the poems of Louise Lab the first Catalan dictionary early printed versions of the Ptolemy world map the King James Bible and Roger Williams's Key to the Language of America the contributors to this volume provide a sense of the political religious and cultural stakes for translators their patrons and their readers They also vividly show how the very instabilities engendered by unprecedented linguistic and technological change resulted in a far more capacious understanding of translation than what we have today A genuinely interdisciplinary volume Early Modern Cultures of Translation looks both east and west while at the same time telling a story that continues to the present about the slow uncertain rise of English as a major European and eventually world language Contributors Gordon Braden Peter Burke Anne Coldiron Line Cottegnies Margaret Ferguson Edith Grossman Ann Rosalind Jones L z l Kontler Jacques Lezra Carla Nappi Karen Newman Katharina N Piechocki Sarah Rivett Naomi Tadmor Jane Tylus

Indigenous Languages and the Promise of Archives Adrianna Link, Abigail Shelton, Patrick Spero, 2021-05 Indigenous Languages and the Promise of Archives captures the energy and optimism that many feel about the future of community based scholarship which involves the collaboration of archives scholars and Native American communities The American Philosophical Society is exploring new applications of materials in its library to partner on collaborative projects that assist the cultural and linguistic revitalization movements within Native communities A paradigm shift is driving researchers to reckon with questionable practices used by scholars and libraries in the past to pursue documents relating to Native Americans practices that are often embedded in the content of the collections themselves The Center for Native American and Indigenous Research at the American Philosophical Society brought together this volume of historical and contemporary case studies highlighting the importance of archival materials for the revitalization of Indigenous languages Essays written by archivists historians anthropologists knowledge keepers and museum professionals cover topics critical to language revitalization work they tackle long standing debates about ownership access and control of Indigenous materials stored in repositories and they suggest strategies for how to decolonize collections in the service of community based priorities Together these essays reveal the power of collaboration for breathing new life into historical documents
