Financing American Higher Education in the Era of Globalization William Zumeta,David W. Breneman,Patrick M. Callan,Joni E. Finney,2021-02-23 This ambitious book grows out of the realization that a convergence of economic demographic and political forces in the early twenty first century requires a fundamental reexamination of the financing of American higher education The authors identify and address basic issues and trends that cut across the sectors of higher education focusing on such questions as how much higher education the country needs for individual opportunity and for economic viability in the future how responsibility for paying for it is currently allocated and how financing higher education should be addressed in the future

The Globalisation of Higher Education Timothy Hall,Tonia Gray,Greg Downey,Michael Singh,2018-06-26 This book argues that the neoliberal globalisation of higher education faces a need for recalibration In light of increased concerns from universities in cultivating globalisation this volume brings together a multi ethnic and multilingual team of researchers who argue that the continued development of internationalized education now requires new research and practices As university leaders seek to build the best programs to help students to go abroad they can face a number of challenges risk management negotiating with diverse partners designing rich experience based learning and the hopes fears and limitations of the students themselves Consequently the authors argue that changes are particularly important given the current US centric and UK centric structural readjustments to globalization policies across all fields of higher education and knowledge production This multi perspectival edited collection will appeal to students and scholars of global education globalization and international education

Developing the Global Student David Killick,2015 Developing the Global Student addresses the question of how students of higher education can emerge from their university life better equipped to dwell more effectively ethically and comfortably amidst the turmoils of a globalising world It does this from a number of theoretical perspectives illustrating the nature of the personal and educational challenges facing the individual student and the teaching professional The book explores the massive social changes wrought by the technologies and mobilities of globalisation particularly how present and future generations will relate to work with and dwell alongside the global other It outlines a range of social psychological and intercultural perspectives on human tendencies to seek out comfort among communities of similitude and illustrates how the experience of life in a global era requires us to transcend the limits of our own biographies and approach University education as a matter of knowledge deconstruction and identity reconstruction rather than reproduction This book brings these considerations directly into the daily business of higher education by drawing out the implications for practice at a number of levels It examines the implications of a globally interconnected world and individual biographies for the design of the curriculum a holistic view of learning in the context of the need to develop the global self what the impact on non academic practice will be if universities as institutions are to enable these changes ways in which the broader student community can transform to offer an experience which is more supportive of the development of global selves Linking theoretical perspectives to present a model of learning as change this book will be of great interest to those working in higher education and particularly to anyone involved in policy design and the delivery of the student experience
