The Future of the International Labour Organization in the Global Economy

Francis Maupain, 2013-10-23 The International Labour Organization was created in 1919 as part of the Treaty of Versailles that ended the First World War to reflect the belief that universal and lasting peace can be accomplished only if it is based on social justice As the oldest organisation in the UN system approaching its 100th anniversary in 2019 the ILO faces unprecedented strains and challenges Since before the financial crisis the global economy has tested the limits of a regulatory regime which was conceived in 1919 The organisation's founders only entrusted it with balancing social progress with the constraints of an interconnected open economy but gambled almost entirely on tools of persuasion to ensure that this would happen Whether that gamble is still capable of paying off is the subject of this book by a former ILO insider with an unrivalled knowledge of its work The book forms part of a broader inquiry into the relevance of founding institutional principles to today's context and strives to show that the bet made on persuasion may yet pay off In part the text argues that there may be little alternative anyway showing that the pathways to more binding solutions are fraught with difficulty It also shows the ILO's considerable future potential for promoting effective universal regulations by extending its tools of persuasion in as yet insufficiently explored directions Starting with an examination of how the organisation's institutional context differs from 93 years ago the author goes on to evaluate the prospects of numerous proposals put forward today including the trade labour linkage but going beyond this As a case study in how strategic choices can be made under legal social and institutional constraints the book should be valuable not only to those with an interest in the ILO but to anyone who studies international organisation labour law law and society or political economy

International Economic Law, Globalization and Developing Countries

Julio Faundez, Celine Tan, 2010 This book is both breathtaking in its scope and impressive in its attention to legal and institutional detail in situating developing countries in the evolving body of international economic law Essays in this volume canvas most important areas of international economic law including international trade law international financial regulation the regulation of foreign direct investment and multinational corporations foreign aid the enforcement of human rights standards and core international labour standards on multinational corporations international enforcement of anti corruption conventions international competition law international intellectual property rights and international environmental law A pervasive theme compellingly developed in most of these papers is the asymmetric structure of international institutions that generate rules in these various areas in which developing countries are mostly rule takers rather than equal participants The current global financial crisis may provide a welcome opportunity for re evaluating these institutional asymmetries In any such re evaluation this book will provide a veritable cornucopia of constructive new insights
