

8 TIPS TO HELP STAFF COPE WITH CRISIS

Amy Stewart with Provider Magazine recently offered these great tips for "Assisting Staff through Adversity." We've summarized her tips below for your convenience.

1 CRISIS DEBRIEFINGS

Take pause as a group to acknowledge what's happened and why it feels bad. Talking about crisis immediately lessens distress.

2 REGULAR TEAM MEETINGS

Discuss difficult emotions among staff. Sharing how you felt during crisis situations with your peers is proven to help with coping.

3 PROMOTING GRATITUDE

Start shifts with staff sharing three things they're grateful for. It's linked to positive physical and psychological health, as well as lower levels of aggression.

4 CHECKING ON NEW CARE STAFF

The effect of stress on morale may vary depending on age and experience. For newer nurses, crisis decisions may have a greater impact. Reinforce why they're necessary.

5 NURSE ASSISTANTS CHECK-INS

NAs may feel powerless during crisis because they carry out the directions of others. Discuss care changes and decisions with them to help their understanding.

6 WELLNESS CAMPAIGN

Launching one now may mitigate staff turnover later. Start small by encouraging breaks, proper sleep, healthy eating, exercise and even meditation. There are apps for all.

7 EMPLOYEE ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

Remind staff that your EAP program is there when they need it. They may prefer to talk to a professional confidentially during these times.

8 POST-CRISIS MANAGEMENT HELP

Promote education around ethical decision-making. It's proven to reduce of moral distress. This education may be a first opportunity for NAs, who've not otherwise received.

systems theory the holistic notion of examining the client in his her environment and a key theoretical underpinning of social work practice The basic assumption of systems theory is homeostasis A crime event causes a change in homeostasis and often results in disequilibrium The victim's focus at this point is to regain equilibrium Under the systems metatheory coping crisis and attribution theories provide a good framework for victim centered intervention Stress and coping theories posit that three factors determine the state of balance perception of the event available situational support and coping mechanisms Crisis theory offers a framework to understand a victim's response to a crime The basic assumption of crisis theory asserts that when a crisis occurs people respond with a fairly predictable physical and emotional pattern The intensity and manifestation of this pattern may vary from individual to individual Finally attribution theory asserts that individuals make cognitive appraisals of a stressful situation in both positive and negative ways These appraisals are based on the individual's assertion that they can understand predict and control circumstances and result in the victim's assignment of responsibility for solving or helping with problems that have arisen from the crime event In summary these four theories can delineate a definitive model for approach to the victimization process It is from this theoretical framework that Treating Victims of Violent Crime offers assessments and interventions with a fuller understanding of the victimization recovery process The book includes analysis of victims of family violence child abuse elder abuse partner violence as well as stranger violence sexual assault homicide and terrorism
