Background

1. A growing phenomenon on the Internet is peer to peer (P2P) file sharing. P2P file sharing is a method of communication available to Internet users through the use of special software. Computers linked together through the Internet using this software form a network that allows for the sharing of digital files between users on the network. A user first obtains the P2P software, which can be downloaded from the Internet Bittorrent, one type of P2P software, sets up its searches by keywords typically on torrent websites. The results of a keyword search are displayed to the user. The website does not contain the files being shared only file referred to as a Torrent. The user then selects a .torrent file(s) from the results for download. This .torrent file contains instructions on how a user can download the file(s) referenced in the Torrent. The download of a file is achieved through a direct connection between the computer requesting the file and the computer(s) sharing the actual files (not the torrent file but the actual files referenced in the .torrent file using any Bittorrent client.)

2. For example, a person interested in obtaining child pornographic images would open the Bittorrent website on his/her computer and conduct a keyword search for files using a term(s) that in my training and experience, I know to be associated with child pornography. A small sample of those terms are "lolita, pthc, ptsc, childfugga, r@ygold, YO, YR, Preteen, and LS or LSMagazine." The results of the search are returned to the user's computer and displayed on the torrent site. The user selects a .torrent from the results displayed the file(s) he/she wants to download. Once the .torrent file is downloaded, it is used by a Bittorrent program which the user had previously installed. The .torrent file is the set of instructions the program needs to find the files referenced in the .torrent file. The file(s) is downloaded directly from the computer or computers sharing the file. The downloaded file is stored in the area previously designated by the user and/or the software. The downloaded file will remain until moved or deleted.

3. One of the advantages of P2P file sharing is that multiple files may be downloaded in parallel. This means that the user can download more than one file at a time. In addition, a user may download parts of one file from more than one source computer at a time. For example, a Bittorrent user downloading an image file may actually receive parts of the image
