Housing Desegregation and Federal Policy John M. Goering,2012-12-30 Housing desegregation is one of America s last civil rights frontiers Drawing on the expertise of social scientists civil rights attorneys and policy analysts these original essays present the first comprehensive examination of housing integration and federal policy covering the last two decades This collection examines the ambiguities of federal fair housing law the shifting attitudes of white and black Americans toward housing integration the debate over racial quotas in housing and the efficacy of federal programs Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 banned discrimination in federally assisted housing and Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968 banned discrimination in most of the private housing market Housing Desegregation and Federal Policy shows that America has made only modest progress in desegregating housing despite these federal policies Providing a balanced assessment of federal policies and programs is complicated because of disagreement over the nature of the federal government's role in this area Disagreements over the meaning of federal law coupled with white and black disinterest in desegregation have compounded the difficulties in promoting residential integration The authors employ research findings as well as legal and policy analysis in examining these complex issues They consider a broad range of issues related to housing desegregation and integration offering new sources of evidence and ideas for future research and policymaking Originally published in 1986 A UNC Press Enduring Edition UNC Press Enduring Editions use the latest in digital technology to make available again books from our distinguished backlist that were previously out of print These editions are published unaltered from the original and are presented in affordable paperback formats bringing readers both historical and cultural value

Structuring Inequality Tracy L. Steffes, 2024-04-02 As in many American cities inequality in Chicago and its suburbs is mappable across its neighborhoods Anyone driving west along Chicago Avenue from downtown can tell where Austin turns into Oak Park without looking at a map These borders are not natural of course they are carefully maintained through policies like zoning and school districting some neighborhoods even annex themselves into distinct municipalities In other words they are all policy decisions In Structuring Inequality historian Tracy Steffes explores how metropolitan inequality was structured contested and naturalized through public policy in the Chicagoland area especially through public education and state government This metropolitan inequality deepened even amid civil rights mobilizations and efforts to challenge racial discrimination and promote equal opportunity She argues that educational and metropolitan inequality were mutually constitutive unequal schools and unequal places cocreated and reinforced one another School districts not only reflected the characteristics and inequalities between places but they also played an active role in shaping those communities over time Throughout the Chicago metropolitan area school districts defined community in part by reinforcing or undermining racial and economic segregation Their perceived quality shaped the identity and value of the community and schooling and its costs could drive development decisions including what kind of property to allow and residents to attract Decisions about school construction student assignment and school support were often important components of development strategy By denaturalizing policy to explore the choices that have brought us here and looking at efforts to challenge them this history helps us understand the inequality we live with today and inspire us to change it
