International World Of Electronic Media:

The Known World of Broadcast News Stanley Baran, 2003-09-02 Radio and television news are expanding everywhere often at the expense of print media Developments in global communications in theory at least have made the world smaller An event anywhere can theoretically be reported anywhere else on radio within minutes on television within hours But theory and practice are often far apart Broadcast News has become a global business almost like the music industry with its own Top 10 and an inevitable streamlining of taste A few major organisations control the newsflow Syndicators guarantee that more and more of us get to see or hear the same stories This is typified by the growth of independent or local news stations and cable suppliers competing mercilessly with the traditional giants of the news airwaves the US Networks the BBC and other Public Service Broadcasters etc But does this development satisfy the democratic demands of enlightened society and of informed citizens This book presents a catalogue of worries but also some rays of hope It looks in detail at news broadcasters on both sides of the Atlantic It also covers the international broadcasting scene as well as third world countries and recent developments in Glasnost s USSR A major empirical study of what we get from broadcast news taking the case of the USA Britain and Sweden is also presented Models useful for understanding both the present and the future are suggested American Exceptionalism, the French Exception, and Digital Media Law Lyombe S. Eko, 2013-07-10

This volume explores the sameness and difference between the United States and France in the matters of freedom of expression on the Internet. The United States and France are liberal democracies that are part of the Western family of nations. However, despite their many similarities, they have a number of cultural and ideological differences. The United States is generally France's ally in time of war and its cultural nemesis in time of peace. One of the reasons for this unusual relationship is that the United States and France are self-described exceptional countries. The United States and France are therefore two Western countries separated by different exceptionalist logics. Lyombe Eko uses this concept of exceptionalism as a theoretical framework for the analysis of American and French resolution of problems of human rights and freedom of expression in the traditional media and on the Internet. This book therefore analyzes how each country applies rules and regulations designed to manage a number of issues of media communication in real space to the realities and specificities of cyberspace within the framework of their respective exceptionalist logics. The fundamental question addressed concerns what happens when rules and regulations designed to regulate the media in clearly defined national and regional geographic spaces are suddenly confronted with the new realities and multi-communication platforms of the interconnected virtual sphere of cyberspace.

Digital Media and Risk Culture in China's Financial Markets Zhifei Mao, 2019-01-15. This book analyzes the risk cultures in China that have emerged from the entanglement of new communication technologies and financial markets, examining the role that digital media play in Asian modernity and offering an alternative narrative to that of the West. The book illustrates the impact of exclusively Chinese digital media on power dynamics within risk definition, arguing that information and communication technologies (ICTs) empower individuals, enabling them to compete with an expert-oriented risk culture controlled by Government and banker-led media outlets. With struggles, competitions, compromises and confrontations major communicators in financial world are collectively producing risk cultures based on interpersonal relations instead of contractual obligations in which insider information is valued over professional analysis. Meanwhile investors are trapped in a risk culture paradox that they themselves have produced as they attempt to take advantage of other actors' uncertainties and eventually produce risks for the entire market. Digital Media in East Asia ,

Global Media, Culture, and Identity Radhika Gajjala, Rohit Chopra, 2011 Through the included essays Chopra and Gajjala offer a mix of theoretical reflections and empirical case studies that will help readers understand how the media can shape cultural identities and conversely how cultural formations can influence the political economy of global media.

Children's TV and Digital Media in the Arab World Naomi Sakr, Jeanette Steemers, 2017-03-30 Who analyses children's screen content and media use in Arab countries and with what results. Children defined internationally as under 18s account for some 40 per cent of Arab populations and the proportion of under fives is correspondingly large. Yet studies of children's media and child audiences in the region are as scarce as truly popular locally produced media content aimed at children. At the very time when conflict and uncertainty in key Arab countries have made local development and diversification of children's media more remote it has become more urgent to gain a better understanding of how the next generation's identities and worldviews are formed. This interdisciplinary book is the first in English to probe both the state of Arab screen media for children and the practices of Arabic speaking children in producing as well as consuming screen content. It responds to the gap in research by bringing together a holistic investigation of institutions and leading players, children's media experiences and some iconic media texts. With children's media increasingly linked to merchandising which favours US based global players and globalizing forces this volume provides a timely insight into tensions between differing concepts of childhood and desirable media messages.
