Farago, Donna Pierce, 2006 The essays collected here explore the Catholic instruments of religious devotion produced in New Mexico from around 1760 until the radical transformation of the tradition in the twentieth century The writers in this volume make three key arguments First they make a case for bringing new theoretical perspectives and research strategies to bear on the New Mexican materials and other colonial contexts Second they demonstrate that the New Mexican materials provide an excellent case study for rethinking many of the most fundamental questions in art historical and anthropological study Third the authors collectively argue that the New Mexican images had and still have importance to diverse audiences and makers Native North American Theater in a Global Age Birgit Däwes, 2007 Indigenous drama is at once the oldest and most innovative the most heavily displaced and resistant American genre Despite its increasing international presence over the past two decades the field has so far been neglected by scholarship This study seeks to chart the genre in both the U S and Canada by its contemporary manifestations from 1968 to 2004 and traces its historical entanglements in simulacral images and colonial surveillance Placing particular emphasis on the fashioning of cultural identity this approach situates Native theater in the larger framework of transnational methodologies General questions of theatricality and representation are complemented by in depth analyses of 25 plays by authors such as Hanay Geiogamah Monica Charles Gerald Vizenor Spiderwoman Theater Diane Glancy Margo Kane Tomson Highway and Drew Hayden Taylor Studies in American Indian Literatures, 2002
