Apes, Monkeys, Children, and the Growth of Mind Juan Carlos Gómez,2009-07 What can the study of young monkeys and apes tell us about the minds of young humans In this fascinating introduction to the study of primate minds Juan Carlos Gomez identifies evolutionary resemblances and differences between human children and other primates He argues that primate minds are best understood not as fixed collections of specialized cognitive capacities but more dynamically as a range of abilities that can surpass their original adaptations In a lively overview of a distinguished body of cognitive developmental research among nonhuman primates Gomez looks at knowledge of the physical world causal reasoning including the chimpanzee like errors that human children make and the contentious subjects of ape language theory of mind and imitation Attempts to teach language to chimpanzees as well as studies of the quality of some primate vocal communication in the wild make a powerful case that primates have a natural capacity for relatively sophisticated communication and considerable power to learn when humans teach them Gomez concludes that for all cognitive psychology s interest in perception information processing and reasoning some essential functions of mental life are based on ideas that cannot be explicitly articulated Nonhuman and human primates alike rely on implicit knowledge Studying nonhuman primates helps us to understand this perplexing aspect of all primate minds
