International Relations Theory and the Third World Stephanie Neuman, 1998-02-14 Is Western international relations theory relevant for the Third World During the Cold War scholars focused obsessively on the challenges of the US Soviet conflict paying little theoretical heed to the role of the Third World in international politics or the sources of its foreign policy behaviour What attention the Third World did receive was within the context of the East West struggle As the hostilities of the Cold War began to fade so apparently did the creative energy of IR theorists Since then in spite of major global change no new theoretical changes have taken place until now International Relations Theory and the Third World addresses the lack of scholarship devoted to Third World policy behaviour by collecting the top analysts and showcasing them in this volume The authors describe and examine the deficiencies of existing theory and present alternate explanations of Third World policy behaviour Taken together their essays demonstrate how exploring the Third World experience can broaden and enrich our understanding of how and why states interact in the international system The Role of Threat Perceptions in International Relations Vindu Mai Chotani, 2025-08-01 With China s rise in the Indo Pacific this book systematically analyses and explores the complex reality of questions regarding threat perception why and when do states perceive or do not perceive China as a threat and what influences or drives these perceptions How have their perceptions evolved and changed over time To provide deeper insight it moves beyond traditional Realist explanations of the China threat Additionally by engaging in a diverse theoretical discussion it studies the various perspectives of key Indo Pacific players India Japan China the United States Australia the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and South Korea Mapping the formation and changing perceptions of threat regarding China s rise this book would be essential reading for scholars students and researchers of international relations studying the Indo Pacific region threat perception global politics geopolitics foreign policy Chinese studies middle powers and strategic studies It will also be a useful handy reference for foreign policy experts government bureaucrats and think tanks
