Monetary and Capital Markets Department,2014-10-15 SUMMARY The Korean authorities have made significant progress since the last FSAP in revising the securities regulatory framework with the current framework achieving good overall compliance with the International Organization of Securities Commissions IOSCO Principles. Importantly the earlier legal impediments to international cooperation and exchange of information have been removed. Since 2011 Korea also applies the Korean International Financial Reporting Standards K-IFRS that follow the International Financial Reporting Standards IFRS. Although the regulators' responsibilities are defined in legislation the complexity of the structure obscures the transparency of the decision making processes. The responsibility for deciding on a particular supervisory or enforcement action can lie either at the Financial Services Commission (FSC) Securities and Futures Commission (SFC) or Financial Supervisory Service (FSS) depending on the nature and gravity of action but it is not always clear which one of them is ultimately in charge. The process is further complicated by the use of pre-deliberation committees at various levels. Self-regulatory organizations the Korea Exchange (KRX) the Korea Financial Investment Association (KOFIA) and the Korean Institute of Certified Public Accountants (KICPA) also play a role in the regulatory and supervisory processes. Publication of additional information on the decision making structure and processes would be beneficial. Operational cooperation and coordination between the various authorities is currently addressed by having the agencies represented in each others decision making bodies. However the full participation of the Minister of Strategy and Finance at the FSC Board has the potential of compromising the independence of the FSC's supervisory and enforcement decisions. Consideration should be given on how best to mitigate the potential for undue political influence arising from such governance arrangements by for example restricting the participation of the Minister of Strategy and Finance in the supervisory and enforcement decisions. Attention should also be paid to ensuring that the various arrangements for gathering commercial input provide for equal and transparent treatment of market participants.
