neighbors accurately      Translating Nephesh in the Psalms into Chinese Hui Er Yu, 2018-08-31 This interdisciplinary study tackles the controversy of translating nephesh by using an intergenerational translation team to deepen our understanding of this term and providing a more valuable translation in Chinese especially for use in specialist Children's Bibles. Traditionally nephesh is often translated in the Bible as soul but despite the limitations of this popular rendering it has led Christians in Chinese contexts to falsely understand views regarding the nature of human beings as a trichotomy. Dr Hui Er Yu's study offers different options for translating nephesh using the context of where the word appears in Scripture as well as in reference to linguistic and cultural meanings in Chinese contexts. The findings in this book will help to remove anthropological misunderstandings among many Chinese Christians related to nephesh as a result of historic translation decisions. Dr Yu takes a unique approach to translation by using an intergenerational Bible translation team ranging from seven to fifty-one years of age which not only demonstrates the importance of intergenerational ministry but also presents a way to fulfill the growing need for well translated Children's Bibles in China for thousands of young believers. This book provides important lessons for the many translation projects working towards Children's Bibles but also for how translation of biblical terms can be better reached through this intergenerational process.      The Cambridge History of Travel

Writing Nandini Das, Tim Youngs, 2019-01-24 Bringing together original contributions from scholars across the world this volume traces the history of travel writing from antiquity to the Internet age. It examines travel texts of several national or linguistic traditions introducing readers to the global contexts of the genre. From wilderness to the urban from Nigeria to the polar regions from mountains to rivers and the desert this book explores some of the key places and physical features represented in travel writing. Chapters also consider the employment in travel writing of the diary the letter visual images maps and poetry as well as the relationship of travel writing to fiction science translation and tourism. Gender based and ecocritical approaches are among those surveyed. Together the thirty-seven chapters here underline the richness and complexity of this genre.      Translation, Travel, Migration

Loredana Polezzi, 2016-04-08 The connection between travel and translation is often evoked in contemporary critical theory both practices seen as metaphors of mobility and flux linked to globalized post modern society. Travel is a multiple activity encompassing temporary and voluntary displacement repeated movement exile economic migration diaspora. Places of origin are often plural and unstable in spite of the enduring appeal of traditional labels such as mother country or patrie. The multiple interfaces between translation travel and migration are the focus of all contributions in this special issue. Starting from different points of view and using a variety of methodologies the authors raise fundamental questions about the way in which we perceive the link between language national or ethnic identity and individual voice. Topics range from the interaction between travel travel narratives and translation in early English representations of China to the special role played by interpreters in mediating the first contact between a literate and a non literate culture from the multiple functions and audiences addressed by contemporary Romani literature and its translation to the political as well as cultural implications of translating popular music across the Bosphorus. A number of the articles focus on detailed textual analysis covering the intersection between exile, self-translation and translingualism in the work of Manuel Puig, the uses and limitations of translation in the works of migrant authors or the impact on figurations of Europe of experimental work embracing polylingualism. Collectively, these contributions also underline the importance of a closer examination of our assumptions about who the translators and the interpreters are and what roles they play in our society.

Victorian Women and the Economies of Travel, Translation and Culture, 1830-1870 Judith Johnston, 2016-02-24

Both travel and translation involve a type of journey, one with literal and metaphorical dimensions. Judith Johnston brings together these two richly resonant modes of getting from here to there as she explores their impact on culture with respect to the work of Victorian women. Using the metaphor of the published journey, whether it involves actual travel or translation, Johnston focusses particularly on the relationships of various British women with continental Europe. At the same time, she sheds light on the possibility of appropriation and British imperial enhancement that such contact produces. Johnston's book is in part devoted to case studies of women such as Sarah Austin, Mary Busk, Anna Jameson, Charlotte Guest, Jane Sinnett and Mary Howitt, who are representative of women travellers, translators and journalists during a period when women became increasingly robust participants in the publishing industry. Whether they wrote about their own travels or translated the foreign language texts of other writers, Johnston shows women were establishing themselves as actors in the broad business of culture. In widening our understanding of the ways in which gender and modernity functioned in the early decades of the Victorian age, Johnston's book makes a strong case for a greater appreciation of the contributions nineteenth-century women made to what is termed the knowledge empire.

Travel Narratives in Translation, 1750-1830 Alison Martin, Susan Pickford, 2013-05-07

This book examines how non-fictional travel accounts were rewritten, reshaped and reoriented in translation between 1750 and 1850, a period that saw a sudden surge in the genre's popularity. It explores how these translations played a vital role in the transmission and circulation of knowledge about foreign peoples, lands and customs in the Enlightenment and Romantic periods. The collection makes an important contribution to travel writing studies by looking beyond metaphors of mobility and cultural transfer to focus specifically on what happens to travelogues in translation. Chapters range from discussing essential differences between the original and translated text to relations between authors and translators, from intra-European narratives of Grand Tour travel to scientific voyages round the world and from established male travellers and translators to their historically less visible female counterparts. Drawing on European travel writing in English, French, German, Spanish and Portuguese, the book charts how travelogues were selected for translation, how they were reworked to acquire new aesthetic, political or gendered identities and how they sometimes acquired a radically different character and content to meet the needs and expectations of an emergent international readership. The contributors address aesthetic, political and gendered aspects of travel writing in translation, drawing productively on other disciplines and research areas that encompass aesthetics the history of science literary geography and the history of the book
