Moral Beliefs and Moral Theory M.G. Forrester, 2013-03-09 Some time ago I wrote a book Moral Language 1982 in which I argued that moral judgments are capable of being true truth apt to use a current phrase or descriptive and having truth value to use a more traditional term that the methods of discovering moral facts are fundamentally similar to those of discovering non moral facts and that moral judgments may be true What I did not do at that time was to develop a moral theory which would demonstrate how the method of discovering moral truths would work and what the criteria of truth actually are In a later work Persons Animals and Fetuses 1996 I did propose a moral theory as to what the criteria for moral truth are however I presented it primarily as an introduction to the discussion of several practical ethical issues and did not argue fully for that theory It is high time that I did so because without showing that such a theory can be developed my defense of moral realism is incomplete It is all very well to say that we can discover what moral beliefs are true but unless we can demonstrate just which beliefs are true the thesis that we can discover this truth cannot be fully defended For this reason the biggest although not the only challenge to showing that ethical objectivity is possible is the presence of moral disagreement and the contention of many that such disagreement cannot be definitively resolved
