Lincoln, 2015-06-24 Excerpt from The School Kitchen Textbook Lessons in Cooking and Domestic Science for the Use of Elementary Schools When the author's Boston School Kitchen Text Book was written in 1887 instruction in cooking in the public schools of America was in the experimental stage the only work which had been done being in a Boston schoolroom under philanthropic management At the request of the founder of this experimental school the Boston School Kitchen Text Book was written to show that an economical course of study and practice in cookery could be arranged for the public schools At that time there were practically no schools for the training of teachers of cookery and the literature of the subject was almost non-existent The book therefore was designed to aid the teacher as well as the pupil and that it has accomplished this double purpose has been proved by its use in the many cooking courses now established in this country as well as abroad For some time a revision of the Boston School Kitchen Text Book has been demanded to meet the requirements of the new era of school instruction and of housework for we now find public school instruction in cooking and sewing in the schools of all sections training schools and colleges for teachers a literature worked out by scientists and a wide public demand for such vocational instruction The present volume is not a revision of the Boston School Kitchen Text Book it is a new book embodying the results of scientific investigation and research as well as the experience of successful teachers in the schools The main food groups the processes of cookery the simpler chemical elements and their action are discussed with special reference to elementary work both in the home and the school Many recipes are given so that it is possible for the teacher to select one to illustrate the principle contained in any lesson About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com
