the publication of Spivak's essay the work has been revered, reviled, misread and misappropriated. It has been cited, invoked, imitated and critiqued. In these phenomenal essays eight scholars take stock of this response. They begin by contextualizing the piece within the development of subaltern and postcolonial studies and the quest for human rights and then they think with Spivak's essay about historical problems of subalternity, voicing and death. A final section situates Spivak's work in the contemporary world particularly through readings of new international divisions of labor and the politics of silence among indigenous women of Guatemala and Mexico. In an afterword Spivak herself looks at the interpretations of her essay and its future incarnations while specifying some of the questions and histories that remain secreted in the original and revised versions of Can the Subaltern Speak, both of which are reprinted in this book.

Pacific Diaspora Paul Spickard, Joanne L. Rondilla, Debbie Hippolite Wright, 2002-08-31. Pacific Islander Americans constitute one of the United States' least understood ethnic groups. As expected stereotypes abound: Samoans are good at football, Hawaiians make the best surfers, all Tahitians dance. Although Pacific history, society and culture have been the subjects of much scholarly research and writing, the lives of Pacific Islanders in the diaspora, particularly in the U.S., have received far less attention. The contributors to this volume of articles and essays, compiled by the Pacific Islander Americans Research Project, hope to rectify this oversight. Pacific Diaspora brings together the individual and community histories of Pacific Island peoples in the U.S. It is designed for use in Pacific and ethnic studies courses but it will also find an audience among those with a general interest in Pacific Islander Americans. Tupou Hopoate Pauu A Ravuvu Carol E Robertson Joanne Rondilla E Victoria Shook Paul Spickard Haunani Kay Trask Debbie Hippolite Wright      Reflections on the Marxist theory of history Paul Blackledge, 2013-07-19 A decade after Francis Fukuyama announced the End of History anti capitalist demonstrators at Seattle and elsewhere have helped reinvigorate the Left with the reply another world is possible More than anyone else it was Marx who showed that slogans such as this were no utopian fantasies and that capitalism was just as much a historical mode of production no more natural and certainly no less contradictory than were the feudal and slave modes which preceded it Paul Blackledge opens this study with a defence of the Marxist approach to the study of history against what he argues as being the naive empiricism of traditional historians and the relativism of the postmodernists He moves on to outline Marx and Engels analyses of concrete historical processes and their critiques of the alternative historiographic methodologies of their contemporaries He then discusses neglected historical works produced by Marxists in the half century or so after Marx and Engels deaths Two central chapters survey recent Marxist debates on first the nature of modes of productions including slave feudal and tributary systems and the revolutionary transitions between them and second the methodological debate over the issue of structure and agency in the movement of history Finally he shows the political relevance of these debates through a concluding survey of competing Marxist attempts to periodise the present postmodern conjuncture This book should be read by historians students of cultural social and political theory and anti capitalist activists      The New Middle Kingdom Kendall Johnson, 2017-04-25

Examining the influential accounts of Westerners at the center of early US cultural development abroad Johnson conceives a romance of free trade with China as a quest narrative of national accomplishment in a global marketplace Drawing from a richly descriptive cross cultural archive the book presents key moments in early relations among the twenty first century s superpowers through memoirs biographies epistolary journals magazines book reviews fiction and poetry by Melville Twain Whitman and others travel narratives and treaties as well as maps and engraved illustrations Paying close attention to figurative language generic forms and the social dynamics of print cultural production and circulation Johnson shows how authors editors and printers appealed to multiple overlapping audiences in China in the United States and throughout the world      The Magic of Concepts Rebecca E. Karl, 2017-03-02 In The Magic of Concepts Rebecca E Karl interrogates the economic as concept and practice as it was construed historically in China in the 1930s and again in the 1980s and 1990s Separated by the Chinese Revolution and Mao s socialist experiments each era witnessed urgent discussions about how to think about economic concepts derived from capitalism in modern China Both eras were highly cosmopolitan and each faced its own global crisis in economic and historical philosophy in the 1930s capitalism s failures suggested that socialism offered a plausible solution while the abandonment of socialism five decades later provoked a rethinking of the relationship between history and the economic as social practice Interweaving a critical historiography of modern China with the work of the Marxist trained economist Wang Yanan Karl shows how magical concepts based on dehistoricized Eurocentric and capitalist conceptions of historical activity that purport to exist outside lived experiences have erased much of the critical import of China's twentieth century history. In this volume Karl retrieves the economic to argue for a more nuanced and critical account of twentieth century Chinese and global historical practice. The Popular Front and the Global Circulation of Marxism through Calcutta, 1920s-1970s Prasanta Dhar, 2022-11-29. This book examines the global circulation of Marxism seen from one of its most highly charged sites Calcutta in India. Building on but also revising existing approaches to global intellectual history, the book presents the circulation of Marxism through Calcutta as a historically sited problem of mass mediation. Using tools from media studies, the book explores the way that Marxism was presented to the public, the technologies used, and the meanings of Marxism in twentieth century Calcutta. Demonstrating how the Popular Front was split between the so-called people's group and those whom were called intellectuals, the book argues that the people's group generally identified themselves as Marxists and preferred audio visual media such as theatre, while the so-called intellectuals privileged academic rigour and print media, usually referring to themselves as Marxians. Thus, the author reveals a polyphony of Marxisms in the Popular Front. Tracing Marxism back to the Bengal Renaissance and the Swadeshi and Naxal movements, this book shows how debate around the meaning of Marxism continued throughout the 1970s in Calcutta and eventually engendered the historiographical movement that has come to be known as Subaltern Studies.
