Massman, 1972      Faculty Status of Librarians in Three ARL Member Research Libraries in New York State John Brewster Smith, 1991      Faculty Status for Academic Librarians Wilfrid Bede Mitchell, 1992      Faculty Status for Academic Librarians Association of College and Research Libraries. Committee on Academic Status, 1975      Academic Librarianship and Faculty Status Coleridge W. Orr, 1991      The Case for Faculty Status for Academic Librarians Lewis Capers Branscomb, 1970 In the late fifties the ad hoc Committee on Academic Status was established by the University Libraries Section of the Association of College and Research Libraries The purpose of the committee was concern with the status of librarians in academic institutions as expressed by the publication of papers by members and approved by the committee After a long debate the committee made the decision to publish here only those papers which helped make the case for faculty status Not all members have seen eye to eye on all points or fully agreed with the central proposition of the committee and the committee was aware that some of their academic library colleagues do not believe in professorial status and titles for academic librarians A number of head librarians directors of libraries and colleges and universities have not provided full academic status for the professional library staff and are not interested in doing so The committee concedes the controversial nature of the debate and while it disagrees with this opposing point of view it respects it      Faculty Status of Academic Librarians in Eight Four-year State-supported Colleges and Universities in Mississippi Lou Helen Devine Sanders, 1992      Academic Librarian Faculty Status Edgar Bailey, Melissa Becher, 2022 Academic Librarian Faculty Status CLIPP 47 contains a thorough literature review and bibliography analysis and discussion of survey results and sample criteria policies and guidelines for appointment promotion and tenure for librarians with and without faculty status No other group of employees in higher education has occupied quite the same ambivalent status on campus as librarians The debate over granting librarians the same rights and responsibilities as faculty has generated a substantial body of 490 literature over the years Most of this research has tended to focus on either a mix of institutional sizes or on large universities with a surprising dearth of studies of smaller institutions The results of the survey reported in CLIPP 47 fills this gap as well as offering practical information and sample tenure and promotion documents and policies

Academic Business Librarians in the United States Elizabeth Casellas, 1979      Academic Status for Librarians in ARL Libraries, 1992      Position Classification and Faculty Status for University Librarians Joe W. Kraus, 1957      Academic Status Association of College and Research Libraries. Academic Status Committee, 1988      An Annotated Bibliography of Faculty Status in Library and Information Science Karl Elwood Johnson, 1992      Status and Tenure for Academic Law Librarians Sharon Blackburn, 2017 The debate surrounding the issue of faculty and academic status for librarians has captured the attention of contributors to library literature for many years This ongoing concern eventually led to collective action in 1959 a report of the University Libraries Section of the Academic Status Committee of the Association of College and Research Libraries ACRL strongly recommended professional librarians be granted academic status and privileges. Opinion pieces have since abounded with some convinced that the perceived benefits attached to faculty status are the due of the librarian while others are just as strongly convinced that status too often comes with added responsibilities and few rewards. In June 2001 the ACRL board reaffirmed a statement supporting the granting of faculty status for librarians. The 2001 ACRL statement reinforces the view that faculty status for librarians is a double edged sword. If this statement is applied by universities or law schools librarians will find themselves being evaluated alongside their teaching faculty colleagues. Full time jobs and lack of release time and funding for research activities put librarians at a disadvantage when being evaluated in a large faculty pool and they may find themselves trying to satisfy two sets of criteria: those relating to their primary job performance as librarians and those needed to meet faculty standards. The law librarians at Texas Tech School of Law Library do not now have faculty or other professional status. In considering whether to seek such status some discussion among the librarians ensued as to whether they would benefit. In order to make a determination regarding this question a nationwide survey was conducted to assess the current state of law librarian status and tenure with results which may have considerable value to universities and colleges considering granting faculty status to their librarians. The
