DIY Herb Gardening For Beginners and Dummies Barbara Dawson,2020-07-13 Herbs are very easy to grow with a little sun and soil that drains well some watering and a little fertilizer or compost Herbs can be grown in the ground or in containers always right in the ground where they need to be Small plants grow quite large 4-6 feet and when lifted they can be multiplied and not get stressed which causes them to be very unhealthy The main reason for growing Herbs growing them in the ground is that they get full sunlight as regular summer and winter 90 degrees If you have very warm summer then not really in the shade in the summertime really that is very difficult to grow under a tree that will block light to them Check them several times during the day to make sure they are at least four hours of sunlight 12 to 14 hours from 9 to 11 and 2 to 4 degrees with a large garden fork in the soil that has become compacted over the years This allows water to drain and the roots to breathe down into the soil This is the most important step shortcuts here are disastrous for you! Adding mulch to your beds in the summer and mixing them helps prevent drainage problems and reduces the ground temperature Herbs should be watered soon the soil is dry of the surface in summer temperatures and humidity drying times vary very much you must check the soil often Do not water more water is not better and not lead to diseases just grow and then for your Herbs which will result in reduced growth For harvesting you simply cut off about 1/3 of the branches when the plant is at least 6-8 inches By cutting like this the plants will regrow very quickly Small plants will grow new leaves from their center In the third or fourth year they should be removed leaving the new ones to grow from the center This is how you watch your plants grow and mature
