Handbook of English Grammar and Composition Chandan SenGupta, Chandan Sengupta, 2021-10-19 English as a language for any non english learner is a difficult task People get afraid of their own limitations and stop interacting Some of the fellow students put themselves at the side having negligible skill of speaking and interacting Because of that reason also they seldom find themselves involved in the process of delivering something in writing or speech with any clear apprehension Use of any uncommon words cannot make any writing beautiful Writing of any specific type should have a definite pattern which is generally prescribed by some of the international organisations Writing will reflect the types of thought process through which a writer express feelings desires wishes and wills Writing also reflects the type of personality and the type of knowledge base Even people express their feelings by carving some symbols for conveying some previously ascertained messages People in olden times used to write letters in a quite descriptive way Some of such letters has become the part and parcel of literature
