

English Explorers' Earthwork

Excavations conducted in the late 19th century revealed a large earthen structure. Soldiers built these mounds for digging trenches and their burning was from the ground and, despite being a fortification, it was the 19th English expedition in the year 1585 that built the earthwork with a wooden wall on top. This was the first time that the English had built an earthwork. They also saw the construction of the structure in the 16th.

The purpose of the earthen wall was to protect the site from attack. The wall was built in such a way that it could not be easily destroyed. It was built in such a way that it could not be easily destroyed. It was built in such a way that it could not be easily destroyed. It was built in such a way that it could not be easily destroyed.
