Through the Flower Judy Chicago, 2006-03-02 Through the Flower was my first book I've since published nine others I was inspired to write it by the writer and diarist Anaïs Nin who was a mentor to me in the early seventies My hope was that it would aid young women artists in their development and that reading about my struggles might help them avoid some of the pitfalls that were so painful to me I also hoped to spare them the anguish of reinventing the wheel which my studies in women's history had taught me was done again and again by women specifically because we have not had access to our foremothers experience and achievements one consequence of the fact that we still learn both history and art history from a male centered bias with insufficient inclusion of women's achievements I must admit that when I re-read Through the Flower I winced at some of the unabashed honesty at the same time I am glad that my youthful self had the courage to speak so directly about my life and work I doubt that I could recapture the candor that allowed this book to reflect such unabashed confidence that the world would accept revelations so lacking in self-consciousness And yet it is precisely this lack that helps give the book its flavor the flavor of the seventies when so many of us believed that we could change the world for the better a goal that has been as one of my friends put it mugged by reality And yet better an overly idealistic hope that the world could be reshaped for the better than a cynical acceptance of the status quo At least we tried and I'm still trying Perhaps I'm just too old now to change

Judy Chicago 2005

Reading Auschwitz Mary Lagerwey, 1998-10-27 My mind refuses to play its part in the scholarly exercise I walk around in a daze remembering occasionally to take a picture I've heard that many people cry here but I am too numb to feel The wind whips through my wool coat I am very cold and I imagine what the wind would have felt like for someone here fifty years ago without coat boots or gloves Hours later as I write I tell myself a story about the day hoping it is true and hoping it will make sense of what I did and did not feel

_From the Foreword Most of us learn of Auschwitz and the Holocaust through the writings of Anne Frank and Elie Wiesel Remarkable as their stories are they leave many voices of Auschwitz unheard Mary Lagerwey seeks to complicate our memory of Auschwitz by reading less canonical survivors Jean Améry Charlotte Delbo Fania Fenelon Szymon Laks Primo Levi and Sara Nomberg Przytyk She reads for how gender social class and ethnicity color their tellings She asks whether we can_ whether we should_ make sense of Auschwitz And throughout Lagerwey reveals her own role in her research tells of her own fears and anxieties presenting what she a non Jew born after the fall of Nazism can only know second hand For any student of the Holocaust for anyone trying to make sense of the final solution Reading Auschwitz represents a powerful struggle with what it means to read and tell stories after Auschwitz
