Islebe, Priyadarsi D. Roy, 2019-12-02 This book provides essential information on Mexico s Holocene and Anthropocene climate and vegetation history Considering the geography of Mexico which is home to a variety of climatic and environmental conditions from desert and tropical to high mountain climates this book focuses on its postglacial paleoecology and paleoclimatology Further it analyses human intervention since the middle Holocene as a major agent of environmental change Offering a valuable tool for understanding past climate change and its relationship with present climate change the book is a must read for botanists ecologists palaeontologists and graduate students in related fields Climatic and Environmental History of Isla de los Estados, Argentina Juan Federico Ponce, Marilén Fernández, 2013-07-11 This book is the result of ten years of scientific research carried out by the authors on Isla de los Estados The research includes their doctoral thesis and many published scientific papers related to the island The book is divided into two principal parts The first part covers different social and natural aspects of this remote island and includes chapters on the scientific and historical background physiography with topographical and hydrographical descriptions climate and oceanographic circulation vegetation and geology including stratigraphy structural geology and geological history The second part comprises a reconstruction of the paleoenvironmental paleoclimatic and paleogeographic history of the island from the Last Glacial Maximum to the present correlating with other paleoecological records from the southern part of Isla Grande de Tierra del Fuego and Patagonia This second part also includes a geomorphological chapter with a characterization of the principal erosive glacial landforms on Isla de los Estados constructed by means of morphometric analysis inventories maps paleogeographic and glacial models and a paleoecological chapter evaluating the palaeoenvironment and palaeoclimatic conditions that prevailed during the Late Pleistocene Holocene times based on pollen and diatom analysis from three 14C dated peat bogs and lakes Finally the book concludes with a review of the island's archaeology and the relationship between the palaeoenvironmental history and human occupation of this island

Palaeolimnological Proxies as Tools of Environmental Reconstruction in Fresh Water Krisztina Buczkó, János Korponai, Judit Padisák, Scott W. Starratt, 2010-05-30 Palaeolimnology is one of the most rapidly developing fields of limnology The primary objective of this volume is to present new palaeolimnological findings from eastern and central Europe Although this area has sometimes received less attention than other areas of Europe the lakes and mires coupled with the variability in landscape and the local differences in climate provide unique opportunity for studying palaeolimnology The volume starts with a review on late Quaternary records from the Carpathian region followed by new results on the history of a crater lake Lake Saint Ana glacial lakes in the Tatra Mountains and Lake Bled in Slovenia In addition the various papers provide new insights on the development of lakes and bogs during the late glacial and Holocene using a wide range of palaeolimnological proxies including diatoms pollen macrofossils pigments cladoceran remains chironomids chaoborids stable isotopes and geochemistry The motivation for collecting recent knowledge derives from the recognition of the importance and applicability of palaeolimnological tools to help in defining reference conditions as designated within the Water Framework Directives and estimating influence of global climate change on surface waters

The Environmental History of the Near and Middle East Since the Last Ice Age William Charles Brice, 1978 Domestikation Landschaftsgeschichte Siedlungsgeschichte Naher Osten Balkan Mittlerer Osten Kulturpflanzenphylogenie allg Neolithikum Vegetationsgeschichte Environmental Change in Iceland: Past and Present J. Maizels, C.

Caseldine, 2012-12-06 3 new biota and extinction of others and extensive soil erosion reaching almost catastrophic proportions have led to desertification of many upland areas and abandonment by local populations. The role of climatic change as opposed to deforestation and sheep grazing in creating these new environments has proved a further issue of great controversy. While our understanding of historic environmental changes remains inadequate, our knowledge of processes that are modifying the present day landscape is also sparse and selective. Little is known of active periglacial processes, slope instabilities and rates of soil erosion by slope wash and aeolian transport. Coastal processes of erosion and beach formation have been studied only locally. Most of our information on recent or active processes comprises records of glacier fluctuations, volcanic eruptions and jökulhlaup events, but still little is known of the mechanisms and processes of landscape change effected by these events. This volume of papers based on a conference sponsored by the Quaternary Research Association and the Geologists Association and held at the University of Aberdeen in April 1989 addresses many of these crucial uncertainties regarding environmental changes in Iceland from the Lateglacial onwards. The papers make a major contribution to dispelling many earlier uncertainties and clarifying areas of controversy. Many of the papers challenge traditional and poorly supported ideas, replacing them with hypotheses based on new data and new insights derived from the expansion of wider scientific expertise and theory. The volume focuses on three major areas of research in particular. The Future of Heritage as Climates Change David Harvey, Jim Perry, 2015-04-24 Climate change is a critical issue for heritage studies. Sites, objects and ways of life all are coming under threat, requiring alternative management or requiring specific climate change adaptation. Heritage is key to interpreting the societal significance of climate change, notions and images of the past are crucial to our understanding of the present and are used to prompt actions that help society define and achieve a specific and desired future. Relatively little attention has been paid to the critical intersections between heritage and climate change. The Future of Heritage as Climates Change frames the intellectual context within which heritage and climate change can be examined, presenting cases and sub-fields in which the heritage climate change nexus is being examined and provides synthetic analyses through five overarching themes: The heritage of change among coastal communities, liminality and the politics of engagement, Dwelling materials, processes and possibilities, Environmental heritage, meanings of the past, prospects for the future, Blurring the boundaries of nature and culture, the politics of anticipation, Climate change and heritage practice, adaptation and resilience. The Future of Heritage as Climates Change provides scholars, managers, policy makers and students with a much needed examination of heritage and climate change to help make critical decisions in the next several decades.

Flora and Vegetation of the Czech Republic Milan Chytrý, Jiří Danihelka, Zdeněk Kaplan, Petr Pyšek, 2017-11-10 This book provides basic information on the botanical diversity in the Czech Republic and relates the patterns in flora and vegetation to environmental factors, biogeographical history and human impact. Focusing on vascular plants, bryophytes and lichens, it summarizes the data on taxonomic diversity and provides details of relict, endemic, rare, alien and other biogeographically important species Main vegetation types are characterized in terms of their structure distribution ecology and dynamics emphasizing the long term vegetation changes since the late Pleistocene historical impact of humans on vegetation and current changes in vegetation including the impact of alien species Special attention is paid to the conservation of threatened plant species and their habitats and ecological restoration An account of the history of botanical research in this country is also provided The book is illustrated with numerous maps graphs and photographs of plant species and communities The book is an essential reference for any biogeographer botanist and plant ecologist who is working in Central Europe or is searching for both general and more specific information on this part of the world Encyclopedia of Quaternary

Science Cary Mock,2013-03-25 The second revised edition of the Encyclopedia of Quaternary Science Four Volume Set provides both students and professionals with an up to date reference work on this important and highly varied area of research There are lots of new articles and many of the articles that appeared in the first edition have been updated to reflect advances in knowledge since 2006 when the original articles were written The second edition will contain about 375 articles written by leading experts around the world This major reference work is richly illustrated with more than 3 000 illustrations most of them in colour Research in the Quaternary sciences has advanced greatly in the last 10 years especially since topics like global climate change geologic hazards and soil erosion were put high on the political agenda This second edition builds upon its award winning predecessor to provide the reader assured quality along with essential updated coverage Contains 357 broad ranging articles 4310 pages written at a level that allows undergraduate students to understand the material while providing active researchers with a ready reference resource for information in the field Facilitates teaching and learning The first edition was regarded by many as the most significant single overview of Quaternary science ever yet Editor in Chief Scott Elias has managed to surpass that in this second edition by securing even more expert reviews whilst retaining his renowned editorial consistency that enables readers to navigates seamlessly from one unfamiliar topic to the next

Palynology and Vegetation History Valentí Rull,Encarni Montoya,Thomas Giesecke,Jesse L. Morris,2019-01-11 This Research Topic commemorates the centenary of the first quantitative pollen diagram by Lennart von Post the founder of paleoecological palynology The main aim is to provide a thorough view of the use of palynology in aspects such as the reconstruction of Quaternary vegetation and environmental changes the role of natural and anthropogenic drivers in the development of the Quaternary vegetation the shaping of present day ecological and biogeographical patterns the potential application of this knowledge in biodiversity conservation and landscape restoration and the development of new methods of pollen analysis and data management The Research Topic is subdivided into four main conceptual parts namely 1 modern analog studies 2 land cover estimates from pollen data 3 vegetation dynamics reconstructions from Europe North and South America Africa and Oceania and 4 large scale reviews and meta analyses

Hopefully this Research Topic will serve to appraise the state of the art of modern palynology and highlight the usefulness of this discipline in long term ecological research Summary of Technical Testimony in the Colorado Water Division 1 Trial
