

For countless generations, people living in a remote group of Pacific Islands have been making epic ocean voyages in open canoes - not for conquest, not for commerce but to exchange shell ornaments with partners across the sea.

The practice is known as KULA.

Today, Kula men continue the ancient exchange, using magic to influence the minds of their Kula partners and to control the movement of shell ornaments around a chain of islands called the Kula Ring, to the east of mainland Papua New Guinea.

Kula is a force for goodwill amongst the Islanders, but there is a dark, sinister side to it. Traditionally, Kula canoes are away for months, at the mercy of weather and flying witches. A strange Kula amulet has been carved from ebony in the likeness of a flying witch. This black, awesome object is nicknamed the "Coffin" because it is believed to have caused the deaths of men.

The Trobriand Islands are the most important group in the Kula ring. They are inhabited by a beautiful people of Polynesian/Malanesian descent. When first discovered by Europeans the Trobriands were named the "Islands of Love" because of the peoples liberal approach to sex, an attitude that has never changed.

This is story of Chief Malabuta, a traditional and aging master, and his vision of Kula - survive?

Kula Ring Of Power:

Politics of the Kula Ring J. P. Singh Uberoi, 1962      The Megalithic Architectures of Europe Luc Laporte, Chris Scarre, 2015-12-31

Megalithic monuments are among the most striking remains of the Neolithic period of northern and western Europe and are scattered across landscapes from Pomerania to Portugal. Antiquarians and archaeologists early recognized the family resemblance of the different groups of tombs attributing them to maritime peoples moving along the western seaways. More recent research sees them rather as the product of established early farming communities in their individual regions. Yet the diversity of the tombs, their chronologies and their varied cultural contexts complicates any straightforward understanding of their origins and distribution. Megalithic Architectures provides new insight by focusing on the construction and design of European megalithic tombs on the tomb as an architectural project. It shows how much is to be learned from detailed attention to the stages and the techniques through which tombs were built, modified and enlarged and often intentionally dismantled or decommissioned. The large slabs that were employed often unshaped may suggest an opportunistic approach by the Neolithic builders but this was clearly far from the case. Each building project was unique and detailed study of individual sites exposes the way in which tombs were built as architectural, social and symbolic undertakings. Alongside the manner in which the materials were used, it reveals a store of knowledge that sometimes differed considerably from one structure to another even between contemporary monuments within a single region. The volume brings together regional specialists from Scandinavia, Germany, Britain, France, Belgium and Iberia to offer a series of uniquely authoritative studies. Results of recent fieldwork are fully incorporated and much of the material is published here for the first time in English. It provides an invaluable overview of the current state of research on European megalithic tombs.

An Anthropology of Services Jeanette Blomberg, Chuck Darrah, 2022-06-01

This book explores the possibility for an anthropology of services and outlines a practice approach to designing services. The reader is taken on a journey that Blomberg and Darrah have been on for the better part of a decade from their respective positions helping to establish a services research group within a large global enterprise and an applied anthropology master's program at a Silicon Valley university. They delve into the world of services to understand both how services are being conceptualized today and the possible benefits that might result from taking an anthropological view on services and their design. The authors argue that the anthropological gaze can be useful precisely because it combines attention to details of everyday life with consideration of the larger milieu in which those details make sense. Furthermore, it asks us to reflect upon and assess our own perspectives on that which we hope to understand and change. Central to their exploration is the question of how to conceptualize and engage with the world of services given their heterogeneity, the increasing global importance of the service economy and the possibilities introduced for an engaged scholarship on service design. While discourse on services and service design can imply something distinctively new, the authors point to parallels with what is known about how humans have engaged with each other and the material world over millennia Establishing the ubiquity of services as a starting point the authors go on to consider the limits of design when the boundaries and connections between what can be designed and what can only be performed are complex and deeply mediated In this regard the authors outline a practice approach to designing that acknowledges that designing involves participating in a social context that design and use occur in concert that people populate a world that has been largely built by and with others and that formal models of services are impoverished representations of human performance An Anthropology of Services draws attention to the conceptual and methodological messiness of service worlds while providing the reader with strategies for intervening in these worlds for human betterment as complex and challenging as that may be Table of Contents Preface Acknowledgments Getting Started From Services to Service Worlds The Human Condition Service Concepts Design and its Limits Service Design An anthropology of Services References Author Biographies

Mol, 2006-12 An Archaeology of Exchange is primarily an archaeology of human sociality and anti sociality Nevertheless archaeological studies of exchange are numerous and varied and archaeologists do not always approach exchange as a social mechanism concentrating rather on the cultural economic or political implications of exchange Even so at times it is worth retracing the implicit theoretical steps that archaeologists have taken and look at human sociality through the eyes of exchange as something new This is undertaken here by concentrating on the exchange of social valuables in the later part of the Late Ceramic Age of the Greater and Lesser Antilles AD 1000 1100 1492 Questions concerning this exchange are framed in a novel mix of theories such as Costly Signalling Theory coupled with the paradox of keeping while giving and the notion of gene culture co evolution joined with Complex Adaptive System theory All these theories can be related back to the concept of exchange as put forward by the French sociologist Marcel Mauss in his famous Essai sur le don of 1950 This theoretical framework is put to the test by an extensive case study of a specific category of Late Ceramic Age social valuables shell faces which have an area of distribution that ranges from central Cuba to the Ile de Ronde in the Grenadines The study of these enigmatic artefacts provides new insights into the nature and use of social valuables by communities and individuals in the Late Ceramic Age      Engineering Asia Hiromi Mizuno, Aaron S. Sourcebook of Family Theories and Methods
 Pauline Boss, William J. Doherty, Ralph LaRossa, Walter R. Schumm, Suzanne K. Steinmetz, 1993-03-31
 Origins We call this book on theoretical orientations and methodological strategies in family studies a sourcebook because it details the social and personal roots i e sources from which these orientations and strategies flow Thus an appropriate way to preface this book is to talk first of its roots its beginnings In the mid 1980s there emerged in some quarters the sense that it was time for family studies to take stock of itself A goal was thus set to write a book that like Janus would face both backward and forward a book that would give readers both a perspec tive on the past and a map for the future There were precedents for such a project The Handbook of Marriage and the Family edited by Harold Christensen and published in 1964 the two Contemporary Theories about the Family volumes edited by Wesley Burr Reuben Hill F Ivan Nye and Ira Reiss published in 1979 and the Handbook of Marriage and the Family edited by Marvin Sussman and Suzanne Steinmetz then in production

EXPLORATIONS AFRICAN SYSTEMS PB KARP IVAN, Charles Stephen Bird, Charles S. Bird, 1987-10-17 Explorations in African Systems of Thought examines the problems currently faced by researchers in the analysis of systems of belief in African societies In contrast to the prevailing emphasis on the analysis of partial systems of thought such as witchcraft beliefs or spirit possession the present collection of thirteen original essays stresses a more broadly analytic approach that relates the study of African systems of thought to other aspects of culture and social organization in African societies explores rich ethnographies and prompts students to skillfully explore and study today's world. Readers will better understand social structures by examining themselves, their culture, and cultures from all over the globe. Serena Nanda and Richard L. Warms show how the analytical understandings and tools derived from over a century of systematically collecting data and thinking about culture can help students analyze, understand, and act effectively in the world. With a practical emphasis on areas such as medicine, forensics, development, and advocacy, this book takes an applied approach to anthropology. The authors cover a broad range of theories, both historical and contemporary, without any insistence on any particular approach and balance it with applied, contemporary, real-world global issues. The new Twelfth Edition includes a wealth of new examples and over 500 references that update ethnographic examples, statistical information, and theoretical approaches.

Lo Bilong Yumi Yet Bernard Narokobi, Paul Roche, 1989. This book adds to the growing number of books by Melanesians on their region and draws on the author's personal knowledge and experience of events that have shaped Melanesia. It is about the state of law in Papua New Guinea and goes beyond custom to look at contemporary institutions. Custom continues to be prominent in village conflict resolution and acts like a two-edged sword, moderating the rapidity of change and at the same time acting as a catalyst for change. Basic principles of English law are discussed and compared to the actual practices of law in Melanesia, and alternatives that would enable Melanesian countries to achieve a measure of harmony between classical and contemporary Melanesia are suggested.
