The increasingly important topic of comparative criminal justice is examined from an original and insightful perspective by David Nelken one of the top scholars in the field. Drawing on experience of teaching and research in a variety of countries the author offers multiple illustrations of striking differences in the roles of criminal justice actors and ways of handling crime problems. The book includes in depth discussions of such key issues as how we can learn from other jurisdictions compare like with like and balance explanation with understanding for example in making sense of national differences in prison rates. Careful attention is given to the question of how far globalisation challenges traditional ways of comparing units. Criminal Justice Centre The volume addresses from a cross disciplinary perspective the multifarious relationship between globalisation on the one hand and criminal law and justice on the other hand At a time when economic political and cultural systems across different jurisdictions are increasingly becoming or are perceived to be parts of a coherent global whole it appears that the study of crime and criminal justice policies and practices can no longer be restricted within the boundaries of individual nation states or even particular transnational regions But in which specific fields to what extent and in what ways does globalisation influence crime and criminal justice in disparate jurisdictions Which are the factors that facilitate or prevent such influence at a domestic and or regional level And how does or should scholarly inquiry explore these themes These are all key questions which are addressed by the contributors to the volume In addition to contributions focusing on theoretical and comparative dimensions of globalisation in criminal law and justice the volume includes sections focusing on the role of evidence in the development of criminal justice policy the development of European criminal law and its relationship with national and transnational legal orders and the influence of globalisation on the interplay between criminal and administrative law

Globalisation and the Challenge to Criminology Francis Pakes, 2013-01-04 There is no doubt that globalisation has profound effects on crime justice and our feelings of security identity and belonging Many of these affect both the making of laws and the breaking of laws It has been argued however that criminology has been too provincial focusing as it often does on national laws and issues whilst others have said that globalisation is the stuff of international relations global finance and trade not of criminology This book disputes this by asserting that criminology has a firm place in this arena and globalisation offers the discipline a challenge that it should relish Some of the field's top scholars from the UK the US Canada Australia and New Zealand consider these challenges and present cutting edge analysis and debate Topics covered include transnational organised crime international policing and a range of other issues involving global harm such as genocide the workings of international financial institutions the fate of international migrants and the impact of anti immigration sentiments in Europe

A particular focus is on borders and arrangements that deal with migration and populations that are excluded and adrift This book highlights criminology's analysis and engagement in new understandings of globalisation in particular its harmful and unethical manifestations and offers a mode of scrutiny and vigilance Globalisation and the Challenge to Criminology will be of particular interest to those studying criminology criminal justice policing security and international relations as well as those who seek to understand globalisation and in particular its harmful outcomes
