M. Maher, 2006-01-19 Americans often think of New Jersey as an environmental nightmare As seen from its infamous turnpike which is how many travelers experience the Garden State it is difficult not to be troubled by the wealth of industrial plants belching smokestacks and hills upon hills of landfills Yet those living and working in New Jersey often experience a very different environment Despite its dense population and urban growth two thirds of the state remains covered in farmland and forest and New Jersey has a larger percentage of land dedicated to state parks and forestland than the average for all states It is this ecological paradox that makes New Jersey important for understanding the relationship between Americans and their natural world In New Jersey s Environments historians policy makers and earth scientists use a case study approach to uncover the causes and consequences of decisions regarding land use resources and conservation Nine essays consider topics ranging from solid waste and wildlife management to the effects of sprawl on natural disaster preparedness The state is astonishingly diverse and faces more than the usual competing interests from environmentalists citizens and businesses This book documents the innovations and compromises created on behalf of and in response to growing environmental concerns in New Jersey all of which set examples on the local level for nationwide and worldwide efforts that share the goal of protecting the natural world Field & Stream ,1978-03 FIELD STREAM America s largest outdoor sports magazine celebrates the outdoor experience with great stories compelling photography and sound advice while honoring the traditions hunters and fishermen have passed down for generations The Archaeology of Maritime

Landscapes Ben Ford,2011-05-21 Maritime cultural landscapes are collections of submerged archaeological sites or combinations of terrestrial and submerged sites that reflect the relationship between humans and the water These landscapes can range in size from a single beach to an entire coastline and can include areas of terrestrial sites now inundated as well as underwater sites that are now desiccated However what binds all of these sites together is the premise that each aspect of the landscape cultural political environmental technological and physical is interrelated and can not be understood without reference to the others In this maritime cultural landscape approach individual sites are treated as features within the larger landscape and the interpretation of single sites add to a larger analysis of a region or culture This approach provides physical and theoretical links between terrestrial and underwater archaeology as well as prehistoric and historic archaeology consequently providing a framework for integrating such diverse topics as trade resource procurement habitation industrial production and warfare into a holistic study of the past Landscape studies foster broader perspectives and approaches extending the study of maritime cultures beyond the shoreline Despite this potential the archaeological study of maritime landscapes is a relatively untried approach with many questions regarding the methods and perspectives needed to effectively analyze these landscapes The chapters in this volume which include contributions from the United States the United Kingdom Norway and Australia address many of the theoretical and methodological questions surrounding maritime cultural landscapes The authors comprise established scholars as well as archaeologists at the beginning of their careers providing a healthy balance of experience and innovation The chapters also demonstrate parity between method and theory where the varying interpretations of culture and space are given equal weight with the challenges of investigating both wet and dry sites across large areas About George Gloria Linda Lewis Collins,2013-10-11 George Paul Collins was born on March 3 1924 in the small town of Berlin New Jersey His family moved to Pleasantville and he was raised there by the bay which he grew to love George loved fishing and clamming his whole life His adult life was spent in the United States Air

Force until he retired in 1972 after twenty nine and a half years George married his high school sweetheart Gloria Linda Lewis The two raised six smart and charming children who now have families of their own He had a very interesting and eventful life and after living through the wars he participated in he learned not to sweat the small stuff He was buried with full military honors at Arlington National Cemetery in Washington D C at the age of 70
